AINEY FIGHTS SELL-OUT CHARGE

Mussolini Does Not Ask. Rockefeller Free Port. Machines Instead of Men. Wall Street Cheers Up.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

H. C. BYWATER, British naval expert, says Italy is building warships in secret, cruisers and destroyers "of phenomenal speed." The same Mr. Bywater criticized United States' 10,000-ton cruisers. He also "accused" this country of experimenting with the largest, most deadly torpedo in the world, electrically impelled, with high explosive power, to be launched against ships by entirely new methods.

LET US HOPE that accusation is sound, and that we are trying to do something to defend the country.

It is not likely that Mussolini is building his ships "secretly." He has always said to the rest of Europe:

"You attend to your business, and I'll attend to Italy's business."

And unlike ourselves, he asks no one's permission to build ships or anything else.

THE GREAT ROCKEFELLER CITY development in the heart of New York, seeking to avoid competition with other New York property owners, has wisely arranged to bring tenants from European countries.

England and France through their governments will exhibit their finest products in Rockefeller City space, and a bill signed by President Hoover makes that center, bounded by certain New York streets, a "free port."

Objects sent there for exhibition only can be admitted free of duty, no customs charge collected unless the goods are sold.

THIS TAKES you back to the middle-ages and the "Hanseatic League."

The late Judge Gary, of the big steel company, spoke of a free port in the south, where ore from Cuba and various metals for alloys could be brought in free of duty and sent out again, manufactured, for sale all over the world.

Copenhagen, Singapore, Hong Kong, are some of the world's important free ports.

THE OWENS-ILLINOIS Glass Company reorganizes its operating schedule, working its men, instead of three eight-hour shifts a day, FOUR SIX-HOUR SHIFTS A DAY, six days a week. Six hours in a hot glass factory is plenty, and four shifts keep machinery working all the time, as it should work.

The men have six hours of work, eight hours for sleep, ten hours for what they choose, much of it, let us hope, for thinking and studying.

IT WILL BE a better world when industry is organized to make machines the slaves of men, instead of making men the slaves of machines, which has been the rule since machines first arrived.

You realize what machinery does as compared with hand labor when you read that workers in a stocking factory in North Carolina are striking to get two dollars and twenty-five cents for making one hundred dozen pairs of stockings, about five pairs of stockings for one cent.

FOR SOME REASON, Wall Street was cheerful yesterday; prices up above the June rally. Cheerfulness was attributed by some to Senator Borah's suggestion that we ought not to collect what Europe owes us. If that is so, "the street" is easily made cheerful.

MONEY IS cheap all over the world, five-eighths of one per cent is the cost is Paris, and in New York money was lent at one per cent yesterday, with government securities as margin.

It is not a good sign when money is so cheap. It means nobody wants to borrow, to start new enterprise that give employment. However, when money gets too cheap those now afraid to lend except on a pawn shop basis will be compelled to adopt more liberal methods.

GERMANY'S HIGH court of the Reich sustains Von Hindenburg's appointment of a dictator to rule Prussia. Germany in a few days will hold another election, to decide between dictatorship and "democracy." Three such elections, without definite result, have been held already. Each costs $5,000,000, which Germans might spend more usefully.

However, this is not the country to criticize any one's foolish spending.

SANTOS-DUMONT, first man to fly in France, has just died in Brazil. His death reminds you of the rapidity of flying progress. It was Santos-Dumont's friend, Bleriot, who won the $50,000 prize that Lord Northcliffe offered to anybody that would fly the English Channel.

Today an American young woman flies, alone, across the Atlantic Ocean, just for the fun of it.

When Northcliffe offered his prize, the achievement was considered so improbable that he got Lloyds, for a small sum, to insure him against paying the $50,000. When Bleriot won, Lloyd paid it, so Northcliffe told this writer.

FRANCE WILL have a great oversupply of wine this year, and the government orders all growers whose vintage exceeds ten thousand gallons to store their surplus for an indefinite period.

Women Tell of Jungle 'Torture'

SAVED AFTER MARRYING INDIANS

Live 6 Months in Dirty Hut After Expecting Fine Palaces

Two white women, a mother and daughter from Akron, O., returned to New York yesterday after six months spent in primitive torture as the wives of San Blas, Panama, Indians. They were Mrs. Cora D. brown and her daughter, Mrs. Gladys Hill, until they married two San Blas Indians and went to live among the primitive, half-savage tribe of their husbands.

The only white women who ever lived among the jungles of the San Blas Islands, they were rescued by United States Naval and Red Cross officials and taken by plane to Cristobal, C. Z., where they were put aboard the S. S. Ancon, bound for New York.

Mrs. Charlie Williams, the mother, is a frail, timid little woman with gray hair, and her daughter, Mrs. White Eagle, is a sturdy, red-haired girl who showed little effect of her hardships. Here is their story of their strange adventures among the jungle tribe, written exclusively for Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Seeing a real bed again after six months of sleeping on the cold, damp ground—actually having bread and meat to eat after a diet of boiled fish and boiled green bananas—these seem the most marvelous things in life to us right now.

Everything else fades into the background—our plans, our future, what we are to do next.

Right now it is enough that we are back in civilization, among people who wear ordinary clothes and live in ordinary houses.

It seems impossible that we

3 BANDITS ROB PAIR AS POLICE GIVE CHASE

Gas Station Looted, Victims Kidnaped as Sleuths Follow

Three well-dressed bandits early today stole a Yellow taxicab and while police radio cars were in pursuit, held up a gasoline station in Wilkinsburg and attempted the stick-up of two others in the East End.

Commandeering the cab at Tenth street and Liberty avenue, the trio forced the driver, Ray Weitzel, of Greenfield avenue, to relinquish the wheel as the cab neared Lawrenceville, after robbing him of $14.

HOLDUP FOILED

With the driver in the tonneau and menaced by a revolver, according to Weitzel, the bandits attempted the holdup of the Standard Oil Company service station at Forbes and Craig streets. The attendant, suspicious of the actions of the men, refused to leave his office.

Police radio cars throughout the city took up the search for the taxi bandits after Vincent Cardomine, of McKees Rocks, attendant at the Fort Pitt Hotel parking lot, reported to police he had pursued the men in another cab to Lawrenceville, where they eluded him.

ROB, KIDNAP MAN

Shaking off their pursuers in Highland Park, the bandits drove to Wilkinsburg, where they held up the Standard station at Penn avenue and Hay street and abducted the attendant, Richard Della, after robbing him of $18.

Weitzel told police after leaving Wilkinsburg the bandit car went to the Standard station at Hamilton and Fifth avenues, where they called for service. The attendant backed into his office and locked the door.

From there, Weitzel said, the bandits drove to Reynolds avenue, where he and Della were ejected. Neither man was harmed.

Sixty Cadets Feared Dead In Gale

KIEL, Germany, July 26.—(INS.)—Sixty German cadets were feared lost today when the training schooner Niobe capsized in a thunderstorm near Fehmarn Island, in the Baltic Sea.

Forty members of the original crew of 100 were rescued by steamers, and the remainder were missing at a late hour tonight.

STAY ON JOB, FATHER COX TELLS VETS

Pittsburgh Priest Cuts Trip Short to Aid Bonus Fight

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Rev. James R. Cox, of Pittsburgh, who led the "hunger march" on Washington, returned from Europe on the Majestic today.

Referring to the plight of the war veterans in Washington, Father Cox said:

"I am going down to Washington at once and tell those veterans to stay there until hell freezes over. Their very presence in the capital of the United States is an eternal protest against existing conditions."

He said the plight of the veterans prompted him to cut short his European trip and that he is prepared to do anything he can for them.

New Clash of Vets, Police Feared

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The bonus army was inevitably headed for trouble today, although it could count to its credit several important victories over district and federal governments.

All peaceful moves of authorities to persuade the marchers to leave the capital have failed, and these failures have combined to create a situation which police privately concede is not relished.

TENSION GROWS

The tension between police and all factions of the marchers was high today, and two factors gave open indication that the police were through with kid-glove handling of the encamped veterans. Efforts to persuade the marchers to leave several federal-owned buildings were abandoned

NEW PROBE BASIS FOUND BY SENATE GROUP

Payment of Hospital Bill By Thompson Alleged

Developments today in the case of W. D. B. Ainey, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, accused last night in a set of new charges by Gov. Pinchot of having "sold the public out," included:

1—Ainey's counsel said there was "nothing in these additional charges," and that a complete answer would be made on August 8.

2—The Senate committee investigating previous accusations against Ainey heard testimony tending to contradict statements by the aged commission head.

3—Feeling in Senate circles was that Ainey should retire and that if he did not another investigation was certain.

4—Frank R. Phillips, now president of the Philadelphia Company, said he had no knowledge of any graft payments of any kind. Pinchot charged that A. W. Thompson, Phillips' predecessor, paid some of Ainey's hospital bills.

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 26.—The special Senate committee investigating charges that Chairman William D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, has received huge sums from utility corporations and their officers will report to the Senate tomorrow that there is basis for a complete investigation of the latest allegation by Gov. Pinchot that the late A. W. Thompson, when head of the Philadelphia Company, Pittsburgh utility, paid a hospital bill of $3,037.40 for Ainey in 1926 and 1927.

The only thing that can avert this investigation is resignation by Ainey as well as by Emerson Collins, another commissioner whose removal has been asked by Pinchot on charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty. This would throw appointment of five of seven commissioners into Pinchot's hands.

LITTLE SYMPATHY

About the Senate today there was little sympathy for Ainey, who until the charges were made linking Thompson with the chair-

Rudy Vallee Taking Law School Course

BOSTON, July 26.—(AP.)—Rudy Vallee is preparing for the time when his crooning days are ended—he's enrolled as a student at the Suffolk Law School.

He does most of his work by himself, stopping in at lectures when stage and radio engagements permit.

MELLON DENIES HE'S RESIGNING

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Andrew W. Mellon, returning today on the liner Majestic, denied reports that he intended to resign as Ambassador to Great Britain. Mr. Mellon said:

"That's news to me—midsummer news. There is no foundation for it."

The Ambassador, while on board the boat, was not certain whether he would go directly to Pittsburgh or to Washington.

He declined to discuss the reason for his trip home, saying only:

"There was a lull over there for a time, and I took advantage of it."

The Ambassador refused to discuss the political campaign, saying:

"I will do anything I can, but I did not come for that purpose."

He said he would return to England within two or three weeks.

A suit in Federal Court, filed March 23 by A. W. Mellon and his brother, R. B. Mellon, may be one of the reasons Ambassador Mellon is returning to this country, it was rumored today.

Papers in the suit against D. B. Heiner, collector of internal revenue, failed to mention its claims, but Heiner is collector of income tax, and Ambassador Mellon sued as a citizen.

When the allotted 90 days for the suit had expired, it was understood the government had agreed to a 30-day extension.

Pension Cut Of Police Blocked

Sixteen pensioned policemen today obtained from Judge Frank P. Patterson a temporary injunction which restrains Mayor Kline and other city officials from changing the laws of the Police Pension Fund so that their pensions would be reduced from $86 to $50 monthly. A hearing will be held September 13.

The injunction also stops the directors from raising or lowering pensions or from barring pensioners from the board.

Next Frida, the men were to vote on a board of directors, including the Mayor, public safety director and superintendent of police. Pensioners were not to be represented.

Attorney Ralph H. Smith, counsel for the petitioners, told the court that 1½ per cent of all city tax paid goes into the fund, in addition to contributions by the members. He said the fund now totals $2,500,000.

Shaw, 76, Insists He Is 'Overworked'

MALVERN, Worcestershire, England, July 26.—(AP.)—George Bernard Shaw, who is 76 today, spent his birthday here, where he is on a holiday, much the same as he spends every other day—"concealing the fact that I'm 76," he said.

The noted playwright and sage looked thoroughly fit. But he wouldn't admit it.

He insisted:

"I'm not fit. I'm very much overworked. I've been that all my life."

BEATTY PRIEST DIES ON TRAIN

LATROBE, Pa., July 26.—Father Stephen Wieland, 52, the past year a professor and in charge of the brothers at St. Vincent Arch Abbey, was found dead on a Pittsburgh-Chicago train upon its arrival in Chicago this morning, according to word received here.

En route to visit his sister in Chicago, Father Wieland's body was found in his berth.

Completing all of his preparatory training at St. Vincent, Father Wieland served for many years in Baltimore, joining St. Vincent's faculty a year ago. He had been a priest for 27 years and was sub-priest at St. Vincent's.

Mata Hari's 'Haunted' House Put on Market

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, July 26.—Honeycombed with disappearing staircases and secret doorways, the house where Mata Hari lived during her adventurous career as a spy in the World War, was offered for sale to day. The house, a ghostly structure half-timbered in English style, has been vacant since the famous dancer was executed for espionage in 1916.

The house stands on the banks of the River Seine at Neuilly, one of the most fashionable suburbs of Paris. Its windows are of stained glass, lending a sombre touch, and the iron grillwork on the windows of Mata Hari's former bedchamber bears testimony to the guarded conclaves that took place in the war days.

It was in this room, reached by means of narrow passages and secret stairways, that Mata Hari received the important men who would tell her secrets of state. Tiny vaulted rooms in the upper reaches of the house were used for the storing of documents and state papers.

Mata Hari was living in the house when troops came and took her to Vincennes to face the firing squad 16 years ago.

Among the near neighbors of Mata Hari, legend persists that she mysteriously escaped death and still lives, possibly haunting the musty corridors of the old house. None of them has ever entered the place.

Duesenberg, Auto Racer, Dies From Injuries

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 26.—Fred Duesenberg, 55, Indianapolis automobile manufacturer and sportsman, died this morning at Memorial Hospital. He was injured on Saturday, July 2, when his car overturned on Ligonier Mountain, on the Lincoln highway.

Duesenberg apparently was recovering from the injuries when pneumonia developed. Two weeks ago an oxygen tank was rushed here from Pittsburgh. This treatment was seemingly successful, but late yesterday he suffered a relapse and this morning passed into a coma from which he did not rally.

His wife and sons were with him, having come here from Indianapolis the day after the accident.

Duesenberg was on his way home from Philadelphia when the accident happened. Ascending a steep grade he saw one car passing another and turned off the road to avoid a collision, his own car striking an embankment. Two hiking college students in his car escaped injury.

SENATE GROUP FINDS BASIS FOR PROBE

man, was receiving general support.

Ainey, through his attorney, John P. Connelly, today said that he would meet all charges August 8, the date set by Pinchot for his appearance to answer the latest accusations of misconduct.

Connelly said:

"So far as we are concerned there is nothing in these additional charges as preferred by the Governor.

"All of these matters can be satisfactorily explained and we are ready to meet any accusers. Mr. Ainey will be prepared to make a complete answer on August 8."

The allegations linking Ainey and Thompson have caused a sensation in the Capitol. Senators who heretofore have fought Pinchot on utility matters today were admitting that the Governor had produced more apparent evidence against Ainey than they believed existed.

ORGANIZATION BITTER

There was an attitude of bitterness against the chairman in organization quarters which have backed him in former fights with the Governor.

One utility representative declared that "somebody has to be thrown to the wolves."

The special investigating committee tomorrow either will ask the broadening of its powers, together with an appropriation to pay for the subpenaing of witnesses, or suggest reference of the investigation to a new committee with expanded authority.

In the committee of seven, headed by Senator William S. Rial, of Greensburg, there is a disposition to go to the bottom of the charges.

The books of the Philadelphia Company are certain to be subpenaed, as well as bank accounts of Thompson in the Farmers Bank and the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh.

PHILLIPS READS CHARGES

Frank R. Phillips, present head of the Philadelphia Company, was apprised last night at Bedford Springs of the charges, and hastened to Pittsburgh to read the allegations of Pinchot, carried west by one of his agents who was in Harrisburg last night as the Governor laid his indictment of the Public Service Commission before the Senate.

Together with his message demanding action on Ainey, the Governor made public a list of the checks allegedly signed by Thompson for the hospitalization of Ainey. With the exception of one check for $303.20, drawn on the Mellon Bank in January of 1926, all of the remaining payments were made through the Farmers Deposit Bank, which is the depository of the Philadelphia Company.

Photostatic copies of hospital records showed that Ainey was admitted to the hospital in Baltimore as "Judge William Ainey," with a penciled notation that bills should be sent to "A. W. Thompson, 435 Sixth avenue, Pittsburgh," the location of the Philadelphia Company Building. On subsequent bills the notation that bills should be sent to Thompson were typed, and the only apparent outlay by Ainey himself in the hospital records was one personal check for $25.

SENATE SHOCKED

The charges by the Governor came as a bombshell to the Senate and the special committee, which apparently had been in the humor to brush aside charges that Ainey has received $150,000 over a period of years from Thomas E. Mitten, late president of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company.

When he broke out his blast that Ainey had been kept in the hospital by the Pittsburgh utility outfit there was a skirmishing about the Senate floor by members of the Senate Committee. One, a stalwart organization follower, told another, friend of the utilities and adherent of the organization:

"We're sunk."

ORGANIZATION FEAR

That was the sentiment which prevailed in the Senate today in advance of hearing on the charges. Senators who have been patently anti-Pinchot, and who have stood with the utilities on legislative and inquisitorial contests, declared frankly that unless Ainey had a defense which they could not now comprehend, he would be removed. They expressed the same opinion regarding Collins.

One Senator, bitterly anti-Pinchot, and probably the strongest cog in the organization management of the upper house, refused to permit use of his name, but said:

"It doesn't make any difference whether a man belongs to the organization, is a Pinchotite or a Democrat. He can't stand for such proof as the Governor appears to have. It is up to Ainey and Collins to step aside, or we shall have to force them out."

'REMAIN IN SESSION'

The Governor asked that the Senate remain in session after August 8, the earliest date under the Public Service Company law, when Ainey can be given an opportunity to answer the new charges by the Governor. If the Senate does not accede to this request the Governor flatly said he would reconvene the Upper House to take concerted action with him for the removal of both Ainey and Collins. Senate organization leaders, fearful of adjourning while the Public Service Commission charges are hanging fire, no matter what the status of relief legislation, declared this morning they would recess if Ainey did not resign.

At the Governor's office this morning it was stated that other charges were in process of preparation and would be laid before the Senate at the proper time. It was asserted that Ainey had bank accounts in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York and Maryland, and in these accounts was reported to be portions of the $185,000 which Pinchot charged Ainey had deposited in slightly more than five years, "of which less than $3,000 represented salary."

CITES RATE CASE HERE

Appearing before the Senate, the Governor read his charges against Ainey in a slow and measured voice, while complete silence reigned on the floor and in the galleries, crowded in anticipation of the report that sensations could be expected at the night session.

Summarized, Gov. Pinchot's new charges against Ainey were:

"You permitted A. W. Thompson, then president of the Philadelphia Company, to pay your hospital bills to the amount of $3,073.40 at Johns Hopkins Hospital in 1926.

"You permitted either the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company or Mitten Management to pay for your transportation to Europe in 1927.

"You committed perjury when you declared under oath: 'I have never been the recipient of any favor, gift or bribe from any person or corporation.'

"Since you became a Public Service Commissioner you have accumulated enough property to make you a rich man, and this largely through money which came to you from improper sources."

When Ainey appeared before Pinchot two weeks ago to deny charges of Chapman that he had been paid sums of money by Mitten, he declared that he had never received any favor, gift, gratuity or bribe or otherwise from any person or corporation whatsoever. This denial, Pinchot charges in the light of subsequent developments, constitutes perjury.

Thompson Held Posts With Three Utilities

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—A. W. Thompson, said by Gov. Pinchot to have paid hospital bills for Public Service Commissioner W. D. B. Ainey, under fire before the state Senate, was a former president of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia. He died in Pittsburgh in 1930.

He had served as vice-president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and as president of the Philadelphia Company in Pittsburgh. He left the latter company to come here as head of the United Gas Improvement Company.

DRY DISORDERS BEFORE JURY

MALONE, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—Having heard "voluminous and enlightening" testimony from a group of Alexandria Bay residents, the federal grand jury was to continue today its investigation into recent prohibition enforcement disorders at the Northern New York summer resort.

Only about half of the 33 private citizens subpenaed to tell what they knew of two disturbances in which two prohibition agents and three citizens were slightly injured had been heard when the grand jury quit work last night.

John W. Genaway, Assistant United States District Attorney handling the inquiry, broke the silence which has cloaked the prosecutor's office from the start only to say "voluminous and enlightening" evidence had been presented.

Among the witnesses to be heard was R. H. Gibson, who said he overheard an agent threaten to "come back and wreck the town" a few hours after two agents had been beaten by a crowd.

WITNESS SAYS MITTEN PAID AINEY BILL

P. S. C. Head's Story Contradicted By Hotel Records

HARRISBURG, July 26.—(AP.)—Additional testimony and records intended to support Gov. Pinchot's charges that Chairman W. D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, accepted valuable favors from utilities officials was presented to the Senate Investigating Committee today.

The new information included statements that Thomas E. Mitten, Philadelphia traction magnate, had paid for massage treatments for Ainey; hotel records indicating Ainey and former Commissioner James S. Benn had been guests at a New York hotel, where the chairman previously testified he had never been, and that an account for $5,800 had been opened by Charles Ainey, a brother, to finance the chairman's hospital treatments at Boston.

MASSEUR'S STATEMENT

Fred F. Lang, New York masseur, in a statement to the committee, said he had massaged Ainey in the Plaza Hotel, New York City, and Bellevue Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia. He said the late Thomas E. Mitten, former head of the P. R. T., and Mitten Management, paid for the first treatment and that Ainey paid for the remainder. Ainey, in his public denial of the early charges, said Mitten had not paid for any of these treatments.

The committee was also shown photostatic copies of hotel records showing that Ainey was a guest in the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, on December 18 and 19, 1928, and that former Public Service Commissioner Benn occupied an adjoining room. The bill was paid in cash. Ainey denied he had ever been a guest at this hotel.

This information was obtained by W. E. Helwig, investigator of the Department of Revenue.

The committee also was informed that when Ainey went to the Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, in August, 1926, an account of $5,800 was opened for Ainey by his brother Charles. Bills totaling $1,147 were paid from this account and the remainder was sent by draft to a New York bank.

VOUCHERS STUDIED

Dr. A. A. Mitten, executor of the T. E. Mitten estate, and A. A. Chapman, Ainey's original accuser, studied vouchers and checks of the late Thomas E. Mitten for the purpose of testifying before the committee this afternoon.

The committee did not discuss its procedure in the face of the new charges made by the Governor last night. Senator William S. Rial, Westmoreland, chairman of the committee, said it is his opinion that, under the spirit of the resolution authorizing creation of the committee, the committee has no power to delve into the new charges. He indicated that the committee will make a report to the Senate soon.

He explained the Governor has not preferred formal charges to the Senate for the removal of Ainey and that he cannot take that action under law until after Ainey's public hearing on Monday, August 8.

NO MONEY PAID AINEY, SAYS PHILLIPS

Phila. Company Head 'Sure' Books Will Refute Charges

Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, today declared that to the best of his knowledge, no money or other thing of value ever had been paid by his company or its subsidiaries to William D. B. Ainey, chairman of the Public Service Commission.

Phillips said he knew such a thing had never been done while he had been here; that it would be "contrary to the policy of the company."

The interview with Phillips follows:

Q—Has the Governor or have any of his agents asked to examine the books of the Philadelphia Company in connection with the Ainey charges?

A—Not to my knowledge.

Q—Are they available for his use if he wants them?

A—They have the right to examine the books of any company under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. An auditor from the commission has been examining the books for several days now, but I don't think his visit has anything to do with the Ainey case.

Q—Since the publication of the charges, have you examined the books of the company to see whether they showed the payment of money by A. W. Thompson for Ainey's bill at Johns Hopkins Hospital?

A—No, I have not examined the books, but there is nothing there. I am quite sure you will find nothing on the books of the company. There certainly has not been since I have been there. As for what Thompson may have done personally, that I cannot answer for.

Q—Will you state positively that the records here do not show that Ainey's bill was paid by Thompson?

A—Not positively, but I don't think so.

Q.—Do you personally know of any money or anything of value paid by the Philadelphia Company or any of its subsidiaries to Chairman Ainey?

A—There has never been any money paid by this company or its subsidiaries to Mr. Ainey. It is contrary to the policy of the company. If I attempted such a thing I would expect to be caught and get what was coming to me.

"Personally, I would withhold my opinion regarding Ainey until I have heard the other side of the story. There are always two sides."

COX TO JOIN BONUS VETS

for direct action, and police inaugurated a policy of "no leniency" for any infraction of district laws.

The direct action called to effect evacuation of the lower Pennsylvania avenue quarters embodies physical "digging out" of the veterans. Steam shovels used to tear down the buildings to clear the ground for subsequent construction tomorrow will settle down to work regardless of whether veterans are living in the buildings.

Nine members of the so-called radical element of the army, including the two leaders, John Pace and Walter Eicher, of Detroit, jailed when about 150 of their contingent tried to picket the White House, stood as testimony that police will stand for no infractions of law.

Several times the authorities have apparently "backed down" just prior to the "zero hour" of an eviction order, but both federal and district officials said that the decisions to extend the time limit for evacuation were made on the basis of "common sense."

Bonus Canvassers Banned from Camp

CAMP O'NEIL, MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 26. — (INS.) — Bonus marchers will find no market here for the "B. E. F. News," it was clear today in view of a statement by Maj. George W. Phillips, personnel adjutant of the 28th division.

Two members of the bonus expeditionary forces were ordered to leave the reservation yesterday when they attempted to sell guardsmen the newspapers published by the organization.

Old Sol Shines On Feasts of Watermelons

Old Sol has been kind. That's the appraisal of the weather man as given by Leo G. Altmayer, Pittsburgh produce merchant, as he prepares for his thirteenth annual watermelon-birthday party at Leach Farm, Friday.

Twelve times before Altmayer has played host to the city's children at his unique parties, and on only three of those occasions did it rain. And that was "just a sprinkle," he explains.

This year's party is no ordinary party; it will mark the culmination of 101 preliminary watermelon parties held during the past week or two at that many institutions in the Pittsburgh district.

Denies Payments

FRANK R. PHILLIPS

Philadelphia Company president, who declared "to best of his knowledge" no money or gratuities ever had been paid by his firm or its subsidiaries to Chairman Ainey, Public Service Commission, accused by Pinchot.

GERMANS LIFT MARTIAL LAW

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, July 26.—President von Hindenburg today lifted the decree of martial law imposed upon Berlin and the province of Brandenburg last week.

This action was taken after renewed rioting had developed in Berlin over night and Gen. Kurt von Schleicher had made it known to all the political parties that bayonets and bullets would be used to end any further election disorder in Germany.

The action of lifting the decree of martial law makes little difference in the physical situation of Germany. Chancellor Franz von Papen remains commissioner of Prussia. The police throughout the country are officered by the selections of von Schleicher. The old cabinet of Prussia is out of office.

The war minister was stirred to action by the outbreak of riotous demonstrations throughout Berlin last night, in which three men and a woman were wounded by police bullets and 50 injured.

Newfoundland Idle Renew Street Rioting

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, July 26.—(AP.)—Several hundred unemployed men rioted in the streets early this morning, pillaging shops and smashing windows before police could quell the disorder. Two policemen were hurt, 18 rioters arrested.

Last April 10,000 persons stormed the Newfoundland House of Assembly. They forced the resignation of Prime Minister Sir Richard Squires, who was attacked and roughly handled.

Society Woman Slain By Mystery Stabber

SAN JOSE, Cal., July 26.—(INS.)—Mrs. Lillian Babcock, 44, society matron of Manila, Philippine Islands, was stabbed to death and her husband, Rider Babcock, wealthy importer and exporter, was critically wounded today by a mysterious assailant who broke into their room in the home of Mrs. Babcock's sister, Mrs. Laura H. PINCHOT ACTS TO HANDLE U. S. RELIEF FUND

Committee Appointed To Draft Income Tax Measure

HARRISBURG, July 26.—(AP.)—Federal aid and a state income tax as sources for unemployment relief held the interest of the General Assembly today.

Gov. Pinchot repeated his intention to ignore the Legislature's effort to direct distribution of federal aid money in Pennsylvania.

The chief executive said he was setting up machinery to distribute all or part of the $45,000,000 for which he has asked the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He said he was "paying no attention whatever" to the Woodward bill, passed by the Senate to establish the legislators' own plan of allocating the expected advances from the national government. He added that "it is clear as a bell that the Governor is the agent of distribution by the (national) relief bill."

ACTION DELAYED

The House hesitated to approve the Woodward bill finally and postponed action when it came up today. In the Senate a substitute measure by the same sponsor was on final passage.

Whereas the first bill named the State Treasurer and Auditor General to join the Governor in directing allocation of the federal money, disbursing it to counties on the basis of unemployment statistics at the rate of $3,000,000 monthly, the Governor plans distribution at the rate of $5,000,000.

The new Woodward bill would place administration of the money under a committee of six. Three members would be named by the Governor. The others, specified in the bill, are Lessing J. Rosenwald, Philadelphia; Frank I. Phillips, of Pittsburgh, and Ralph Weeks, of Scranton.

WASHINGTON SILENT

Meanwhile, however, no definite information has been forthcoming from Washington to indicate how much the state will receive and under what restrictions it will be made available.

Pursuant of the resolution approved last night, Speaker C. J. Goodnough today appointed a House committee of nine to draft a legal income tax bill for consideration at the special session.

The proposed bill would avoid the constitutional barrier against a graduated tax by imposing a flat 1 per cent tax with refunds for filing returns and prompt payment. The effect of the refunds would be to eliminate any tax on incomes of $3,500 or less.

TILSON TO QUIT CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, former Republican House leader, said today in a statement printed in the Congressional Record that he would resign from Congress and would not run for re-election.

Tilson, who had served in the House for 22 years, was defeated by Representative Snell, of New York, as the Republican nominee for Speaker at the beginning of the present Congress.

In his statement, Tilson said he had planned to "seek activity in other fields where I trust my talents will be equally well employed and where I hope the net financial return for my labors will at least be on the right side of the ledger."

Washington Registered As Homestead Voter

Signal honor is being paid by the Borough of Homestead to George Washington in this, his bicentennial year, by placing the Father of Our Country on the registration lists, which entitles him to vote on all borough matters.

As if that weren't enough, a place has been made on the same lists for his wife, Mrs. Martha Washington. Both have been dead for some time.

Two contemporary notables who have received the degree of "R. V." from Homestead are Amos Jones and Andrew Brown, who go on the air just as the polls close, although this is purely coincidental. Another is Ada Boat, which happens to be the name of a towboat.

Leo Riordan, director of the county's Bureau of Investigations and Claims, says all these names are on the Homestead books. Four thousand others are there, too, all fictitious, and he says he's going to arrest somebody.

WOMEN, 3 MEN HELD IN MT. LEBANON TRAFFIC RUMPUS

TWP. CHAIRMAN PROSECUTOR IN ATTACK

Clark Already Under Bond, Pushes Case Against Others

The second phase of the rumpus at Mt. Lebanon's July Fourth community celebration has brought to five the number of persons now held for court. L. C. Clark, chairman of Mt. Lebanon's Board of Commissioners, himself under $1,800 bond, last night had his four accusers held on charges of assault and battery. They waived hearings, as had Clark, accused of assault and battery, reckless driving and driving while intoxicated.

CLARK ACCUSED

The charges against Clark were brough before Justice Ira F. Edmundson.

Those involved in the charges brought by Clark include Earl E. Gangewere, his wife, Alva, and his father, E. J. Gangewere, all of 46 Florence place, Mt. Lebanon, and A. C. Feagan, 1213 McNeilly avenue, Dormont.

All were charged with aggravated assault and battery by Clark and Feagan, and Mrs. Gangewere was charged with assault and battery in connection with an alleged attack on Mrs. James C. McClain, 210 Beverly road, who said she had sought to act as peacemaker.

Clark, testifying at the hearing before Justice Bishop, declared he had been attacked by "at least four pairs of fists" at once. He said his eye and face had been scratched and his rib dislocated so that he "couldn't handle himself very well."

FACE SCRATCHED

Mrs. Gangewere, he testified, reached inside his car and scratched his face; her husband Clark said, punched him and broke his glasses; Feagan, he averred, struck him "a very hard blow which somebody said might have killed me, but it didn't;" and Gangewere's aged father Clark charged, hit him, but it didn't hurt.

Mrs. McClain charged Mrs. Gangewere and Feagan with punching her when she went to Clark's aid and tried to act as peacemaker.

The informations accused Clark of striking Mrs. Gangeware on the neck and on the chest with his fists; kicking her husband on the shoulder, on the chest, in the stomach and in the face, and with striking Feagan in the face with his fist, breaking his glasses and otherwise abusing him.

The trouble started, Clark testified, when his car accidentally ran against the bumper of Gangewere's car and Gangewere backed his car into the Clark car.

The Gangwere's previously had charged that, in a traffic jam, Clark had repeatedly bumped their car, refused to cease bumping it, and finally attacked them.

Rescued From Indian Tribe

MRS. WHITE EAGLE — MRS. CHARLES WILLIAMS

The red-haired former Gladys Brown and her timid mother, both of Akron (O.), on their return to the United States after their rescue by Red Cross airplanes from a San Blas Indian tribe in the Canal Zone. They had married two Indian circus performers and went to live with them in their primitive village. They tell their own story of the hardships which forced them to appeal for relief in today's Sun-Telegraph. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

should still be alive after the tortures we have been through.

When we married these Indians, we thought they were American Indians at first, and then that they were big chiefs of the San Blas tribe.

White Eagle came through Akron with a medicine show. Charlie Williams was one of his friends, and worked on a boat that ran from New York to Jacksonville.

THOUGHT OF PALACES

When they both lost their jobs, we thought it would be all right to go with them to their people. We expected to find splendid ancient palaces down there.

Instead we were given one room in the home of Charlie's sister. The house was built of wild cane and leaves, and the roof was no better than none at all.

It rained—always it rained.

And we had to sit in the house and hold umbrellas over us, to try and keep dry.

There was no floor in our room, and no beds on the whole island.

They gave us one hammock for all of us to sleep in. Then White Eagle disappeared, and the three of us were left. But still, three people couldn't sleep in one hammock. So we took turns on the floor.

ONE MEAL DAILY

We had one meal a day—of boiled fish and boiled green bananas. And the Indians saw that we had very little of that. They resented the fact that we were white. They wanted their men to take native wives.

The fish was half cleaned, and cooked scales and all. On the rare occasions when a hunter would bring in some meat, the animal was cooked, fur and all, without even being washed.

Meals are informal. A kettle is set in the middle of the floor and everybody squat down around it, dipping in with his hands.

The children wear no clothes at all until they are 12 or 14 years old.

The men wear home-made trousers, and nothing else.

The women wear bright blouses of a sort of applique, bright pieces of cloth stitched one over the other, and their skirts are just pieces of bright striped or figured cloth, wrapped around them. They all wear big red handkerchiefs over their heads. And all women wear nose rings. And a red streak is painted down the middle of their noses.

WEAR NOSE RINGS

Girl babies have their noses pierced as soon as they are born, and wear the rings to their grave.

Both men and women wear huge hoop earrings of gold, hanging sometimes to their shoulders.

They tried to make us wear nose rings, but we managed to escape that.

The medicine man is the big power of each settlement—almost a god.

He officiates at funerals, and at the strange ceremonies performed when a girl is pronounced ready for marriage.

The dead are buried in their hammocks—which are suspended in their graves. And all the things they have used during life—eating utensils, clothes, weapons—are laid on top of the grave, for the use of the spirit, which is said to come out of the grave each night to eat and drink.

They have little religion, but they told us their one legend, one that no white person ever before was allowed to hear. It concerns their god, Ebeorgan, who, they say, came down from heaven with his disciples, each of whom went to a different island, and taught the Indians all that they know—how to make canoes and hammocks, what to plant, make their clothes and fish.

FEAR DEVIL

They are afraid to go to the mainland—they say the Devil lives there.

And when the sea is rough, they say it is a crazy man swimming, who chruns up the waters. Then the medicine man picks one unfortunate out of the tribe as the crazy man, doctors him for a while and if he considers him still uncured, the man is killed.

When the rescue plane came for us, the Indians were frightened. But they were glad to see us go. Charlie Williams came and stood beside the plane. We told him we were going away. He said:

"That's good. When are you coming back?"

And after we were in the air we shouted back:

"Never."

Catherine said she ran away four months ago when her parents ordered her to marry the 40-year-old man. The sisters were turned over to social workers.

Dark Glasses Hide Garbo From Curious in N.Y.

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Perhaps the big town frightened her, perhaps she feared the attentions of her public. Anyway—

Greta Garbo is in hiding.

Not since she arrived yesterday from Hollywood and immediately fled into seclusion has even the most zealous film fan been able to catch a glimpse of the talkie heroine.

Dark glasses hid her eyes and the collar of a long tan coat screened her face as she streaked in a taxicab from the railroad station to a Bronxville hotel. She wasn't seen again.

She is expected to sail Saturday for home in Sweden, perhaps to abandon film work for good. But she may change her mind.

AVIATRIX FACES TWO GRILLINGS NEXT WEEK

Mrs. Keith Miller to Appear as Murder Trial Witness

MIAMI, Fla., July 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Jessica M. Keith Miller, Australian flier, faces a double ordeal here next week.

Monday she will appear at a closed hearing before immigration officers. The next day she will go into the state courts as a defense witness for Capt. W. N. Lancaster, former British army aviator, charged with murder in the death of her fiance, Haden Clark, writer.

He was shot in Mrs. Keith Miller's home April 21, where he and Lancaster were guests. Both she and Lancaster expressed belief Clark shot himself, but forged suicide notes and other circumstances led to Lancaster's indictment.

Lancaster also was named in an immigration warrant charging illegal entry to the United States, but service was withheld pending the outcome of the murder trial.

Mrs. Keith Miller is charged with entering the United States May 27, 1931, illegally as an Australian citizen. She is under $1,000 bond pending her hearing.

No ruling on her status will be made until officials at Washington have studied the evidence. The aviatrix contends her presence here is legal.

Her daughter, Patricia, was with her, recovering also from the shock of the New York theatrical producer's sudden death Friday night.

It will be perhaps a month before Miss Burke's work at the studio can be completed, permitting her to take Ziegfeld's body back to New York for final disposition.

Mrs. Patterson told detectives that five dogs, which usually are good watch dogs, made no noise. She said a few hours earlier they had created a commotion by their barking when a maid returned.

REYNOLDS CASE HANGS FIRE

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 26.—(AP.)—A new grand jury was drawn and organized here yesterday, but no indication came as to whether it would inquire into the strange death of Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir, from a bullet wound here 19 days ago.

TROOPS GUARD MINE ZONE JAIL

CLARKSVILLE, Ark., July 26.—(AP.)—National guardsmen patrolled the county jail and prepared to act in emergency today as troopers and county officers rounded up reputed leaders of the union miners who injured a coal pit boss in an attemtp to stop non-union labor yesterday.

The roundup was launched last night and the jail patrol established against further disorder after three men were arrested. Sheriff Fred Russell said the roundup would continue until about 30 ringleaders in the mine troubles had been brought in.

More witnesses were being heard by the county grand jury today in the probe to fix responsibility for alleged furnishing of about 70,000 gallons of county-purchased gasoline to officials and members of their families.

KEATON'S WIFE BLAMES ANTICS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 26.—(AP.)—Off the screen antics of Buster Keaton, film comedian, are listed by Natalie Talmadge among reasons for the divorce she desires from her "frozen face" mate.

Buster's comment on the filing yesterday of a divorce complaint by Natalia after 11 years of married life, was:

"I guess I'm a washout."

In addition to the interlocutory decree of divorce sought, Mrs. Keaton asked the Superior Court to approve a property settlement whereby she is given the custody of the couple's two sons, Joseph, 10, and Robert, 8, and $500 a month for their support.

Besides remaining away from home at night and returning without explaining his absence, Mrs. Keaton said her husband's behavior in the presence of guests is another cause for censure.

'AINEY TOOK GIFTS'-PINCHOT

Hospital Bill Paid By A. W. Thompson, Governor Says

HARRISBURG, July 26.—(AP.)—The charges made by Gov. Pinchot against Chairman W. D. B. Ainey of the Public Service Commission last night were as follows:

In addition to the charges already pending against you upon which you were heard on Monday, July 11, 1932, I hereby prefer against you the following charges of misconduct in office:

1—That you have at various times while a member of the Public Service Commission, permitted public service companies or their officers or agents to provide for you services, transportation and favors of various kinds.

Among instances of this reprehensible conduct are the following:

(A)—You permitted Mr. A. W. Thompson, then president of the Philadelphia Company . . . a holding company controlling the Pittsburgh Railways Company, the Duquesne Light and Power Company, the Allegheny County Heating Company and the Equitable Gas Company . . . to pay your hospital bills to the amount of $3,073.40 when you were a patient at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., from December 23, 1925, to April 9, 1926.

(B)—You permitted either the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company or Mitten Management, Incorporated, through A. B. Millar, their representative, to pay for your transportation to Europe in the fall of 1927.

Charges Perjury

2—That you committed perjury when you declared under oath in paragraph 25 of your answer to my original charges: "I have never permitted any man directly or indirectly to influence me in my official duties. I have never been and would not be the recipient of any favor, gratuity, gift, bribe, or otherwise from any person or corporation whatsoever."

3—That since you became a Public Service Commissioner in 1914 you have accumulated real and personal property enough, either in your own name or the name of your daughter, or of yourself and daughter, to make you a rich man and that this property was acquired largely through the use of money which came to you from improper sources.

Explains to Senate

In accordance with Article IV, Section 15, of the public service company law, you will be afforded an opportunity to be publicly heard in person or by counsel in your own defense on Monday, August 8, 1932, at 2 o'clock p. m., eastern standard time, in the Governor's reception rooms, in the State Capitol.

Explaining the charges to the Senate the Governor continued:

With these new charges I present photostatic copies of certain records of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., which show that A. W. Thompson, then president of the Philadelphia Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., a holding company for Pennsylvania Public Utilities, paid bills to the amount of three thousand and seventy-three dollars and forty cents ($3,073.40), for hospital treatment to Chairman Ainey, between December 23, 1925, and April 9, 1926.

There also have been presented to the Senate investigating committee photostatic copies of the records of the Cunard Steamship Company an its agent in Philadelphia, which show that A. B. Millar, at that time in the employ of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company and Mitten Management and now managing director of the Pennsylvania Electric Association and the Pennsylvania Gas Association, paid for the passage of W. D. B. Ainey and his attendant on the steamer Berengaria, sailing from New York on August 10, 1927, contrary to his sworn statement that he did not. Additional evidence germane to the charges is also transmitted.

Quotes Hospital Records

In co-operation with the Attorney General a committee of your honorable body is now investigating the charges heretofore made against Chairman Ainey. It will doubtless be your desire to refer to that committee for investigation the charges made today.

The original records at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., conclusively show that A. W. Thompson, then president of the Philadelphia Company, paid bills totaling $3,073.40 for Chairman Ainey's treatment in that hospital from December, 1925 to April, 1926. These records consist of the detailed account of Chairman Ainey and the hospital's complete record of checks deposited to its account. On the Ainey record appears the sentence "Bill to Thompson, A. W., address 435 Sixth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa." That address was then and is now the address of the Philadelphia Company.

Complaints Dismissed

On Mr. Ainey's account appear credits of varying amounts. The hospital's check record shows that these amounts are identical with the amounts of checks drawn by Thompson in payment of Ainey's bill.

The Philadelphia Company is a holding company. It controls the Pittsburgh Railways Company, the Duquesne Light Company, the Equitable Gas Company and other Pennsylvania utilities. At the time when these payments were made by Mr. Thompson the Equitable Gas Company had before the Public Service Commission a highly important rate case.

The complaints of the Allied Boards of Trade of Allegheny County, the City of Pittsburgh, the City of McKeesport and other complainants were finally dismissed and the citizens of Pittsburgh and vicinity paid the increased rates during the seven years before a decision was reached, and have been paying them ever since.

Evidence already laid before your investigating committee conclusively shows that on August 3, 1927, A. D. Millar, the representative of Thomas E. Mitten and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, purchased accommodations for Chairman Ainey and his male attendant on the steamship Berengaria on which they sailed for Europe on August 10, 1927. The evidence includes a receipt given by the travel agency to Mr. Millar for $1,785 covering transportation for himself, his wife, his daughter, Chairman Ainey and Mr. Murphy, Ainey's attendant.

It also includes the deposit slip of the travel agency for $1,785 and the charge against Millar's bank account in this identical amount.

The records of the Cunard Steamship Company show that Ainey traveled as one of the Millar party of five. It has also been established that before leaving for Europe, Millar, notwithstanding his testimony to the contrary last week, tried to get accommodations for his party of five for the return trip.

Traveled 5 Weeks

Millar testified that the trip lasted 10 weeks. The passenger list of the Hamburg-American ship Resolute shows that the same party returned not in 10 but in five weeks.

Millar testified that the cost of the trip was $8,000, originally paid by Mitten Management and subsequently refunded to that company by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company. Evidence laid before your committee this evening shows that Mitten Management has no record of such a refund.

I have confidential information that during a period of slightly more than five years Mr. Ainey deposited in certain banks upwards of $185,000, of which less than $3,000 represented salary. The deposit of such a sum on a salary of $10,500 a year requires explanation. Your special investigating committee, through its right of subpena, can and should call upon Chairman Ainey to explain fully these deposits and his other property holdings.

This evidence drags at last into the light an evil system long suspected in Pennsylvania, but until now not definitly proved. This system includes the deliberate bribing of public officials as a method of doing business. Its purpose is extortion and illegal profits. By this system the utilities succeed in charging excessive rates to the people and in securing huge profits for insiders.

We have here the spectacle of the heads of two great corporations, of high standing among the business organizations of this state, paying out money secretly for the expenses of a public official whose decisions were vital to them.

Charges 'Sell Out'

In all the long fight for justice to the people of Pennsylvania from the public utilities since the Public Service Commission was first established, this is the most significant event. It is conclusive evidence that certain relations of the public utilities and the Public Service Commission has sold the public out. It is clear proof that the utility rates now in existence in Pennsylvania are in some cases at least the results of bribery and corruption.

The practice of the public utilities to secure the appointment of public service commissioners favorable to them, to prevent the removal of commissioners favorable to them and to take over commissioners who, when appointed, were favorable to the people, has long been suspected. This evidence will change suspicion into certainty and the public belief that regulation does not regulate will be changed into deep-seated conviction, unless prompt punishment follows the disclosure of the offense.

The reason I cannot dismiss Chairman Ainey and ask for the consent of the Senate at once is that the evidence now submitted does not fall technically within the specific changes previously made.

Asks Senate Recess

Under Article IV, Section 15, of the Public Service Company Law, at least 10 days' notice of a hearing must be given. Otherwise I would at this time ask for your consent to his immediate removal.

In view of the extreme gravity of the offense in this case, and the urgent necessity for restoring confidence in regulation of public ownership of all utilities is now to follow, I ask that the Senate recess until these charges can be disposed of, even though the Legislature be sooner adjourned.

Unless the Senate complies with this request, it will enable Chairman Ainey, although known to be unfaithful and unfit, to remain in control of the Public Service Commission for half a year longer and will thus effectively destroy whatever remnants of respect for the commission, and for regulation under the commission, may still survive.

A second member of the Public Service Commission, Emerson Collins, is now facing charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty. I have fixed August 1st as the date when he may be heard in his own defense.

Because of the seriousness of the charges against Chairman Ainey and the fact that Commissioner Collins has already received $25,000 salary during 30 months while incapacitated for any work, I shall be obliged to reconvene the Senate if it shall finally adjourn before acting upon my recommendation upon these charges.

Ainey Rich With Wrongful Gains Says Pinchot

Recalls P. R. T. Case

But I have not come before you merely to put in your hands the proof of indefensible, if not criminal, relations between Chairman Ainey and certain public utilities in Pennsylvania, important though that evidence unquestionably is. I have come before you to urge upon you action that will go far to clear up the long disputed and much controverted public utility question in Pennsylvania—action which will be of direct and unquestioned value to every man and woman who pays, directly or indirectly, a public utility rate or charge anywhere in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Heretofore my accusation, often repeated, that the Public Service Commission, under the Chairmanship of W. D. B. Ainey, is the cat's-paw of the public utility corporations has been widely denounced by utility sympathizers as unproved and unjustified. The evidence herewith submitted would seem to show that I spoke no more than the truth.

In addition, I recall to your minds that the year before Chairman Ainey went to Johns Hopkins Hospital in September, 1924, the Public Service Commission, to quote my own statement, "acted with indecent haste in making a temporary fare of 7½—8 cents for the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, and without full and fair consideration for the rights of the people. Their action was so grossly improper that I was compelled to make a vigorous public protest against it. The course pursued by the commission excited widespread public indignation against that body, not only in Philadelphia but throughout Pennsylvania."

In January, 1926 (the year Chairman Ainey's bills were paid by A. W. Thompson), I quote again:

"With the same indecent haste, a bare majority of the seven commissioners, at 7 o'clock on the evening before the meeting of the General Assembly in extraordinary session when important phases of the case had not been fully studied and reported on by the commission's experts, forced a decision (confirming the temporary fare) in the Philadelphia Rapid Transit fare case.

Benn, Shelby Fight

"In the face of the declaration of two commissioners that they were not yet ready to act, in the face of the fact that important information in the hands of the commission had not yet been digested, a bare majority of the commission steam-rollered the minority and once more rendered hasty judgment on the matter of the most vital consequences to the people of Philadelphia.

"Such action is not only improper in itself, but it tends to throw into discredit the whole system of regulation of public utilities."

In 1925, I removed Commissioners Benn and Shelby because they were unfaithful public servants and unduly favorable to the public utilities. In an opinion which was read with amazement by the bar of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court restored them to office. The present situation supplies a perfect opportunity to ascertain whether or not I was right.

You have known since May, 1931, of the findings of the House Committee on investigation of the Public Service Commission and public utility companies to the effect that in 1930 the excess earnings of the electric public utilities were $31,864,414 above a fair rate of return and that Pennsylvania investors were sold electric securities which contained $113,327,521 of pure water. You have also known of the evidence that huge excess earnings had been taken by the utilities, without serious objection or dissent from the commission for several years prior to 1930.

In Ainey Quiz

DR. A. A. MITTEN

Son of the late Thomas E. Mitten and executor of the estate of the former head of P. R. T. and Mitten Management, who faced State Senate committee questioning today into Gov. Pinchot's charges involving his father and Public Service Commission Chairman Ainey.

Investors Suffer

The same inquiry produced evidence of excess earnings in the natural gas industry of $6,843,856. You have known for over a year also of evidence that Pennsylvania investors were sold water company securities whose values were weakened by an inexcusable inflation of $20,421,865 for good will and of evidence of a similar inflation of $18,216,806 in the natural gas industry.

Together with the water in electric securities, a total of almost $162,000,000 was in a few years, pumped into utility securities with the assent of the commission. Pennsylvania investors in these securities have since suffered terrific punishment as a result of the attitude of the commission on this matter. It has been costly indeed to both consumers and investors in Pennsylvania.

Suspicion that all is not right with the commission is not new. You have had before you since April, 1931, the conclusion of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Utilities, made after the first evidence as to the neglect of its duty by th commission had been given. He said:

"The removal of the present commissioners will renew public confidence in utility regulation."

This is no small matter, for the utilities in this commonwealth which fall under the jurisdiction of the commission annually taken from people justly and unjustly, a total of more than half a billion dollars.

Because of the evidence discovered in the case of Chairman Ainey, members of the Public Service Commission are under suspicion. If they are innocent, as they are presumed to be, you owe it to them to clear their names. If they are guilty, you owe it to the people to discover and punish their guilt.

If, on the other hand, any of them is guilty, their objections to an investigation and the objections of their friends, can have no weight.

Urges Broad Inquiry

I recommend that the Senate investigation, which now includes only the relations of Chairman Ainey to certain public utilities, be broadened to cover the relations between Pennsylvania utilities and the Public Service Commission and the relations of these utilities with every man who was a member of the Public Service Commission at or about the time covered by the charges against Ainey and until this day.

I recommend that the present investigating committee, or such other agency as the Senate may choose to create, be directed to continue investigations in cooperation with the Attorney General, that it be authorized to sit during the recess of the Senate, and that it be instructed to subpena and examine the accounts, bank deposits and other financial records, of all who were members of the commission at the time of the transactions involved in this case and for a reasonable number of years before and after.

Abundant Evidence

The evidence already at hand is abundant to justify the dismissal of Chairman Ainey. On no conceivable theory can the payment of the expenses of a Public Service Commissioner, and especially the chairman of the Public Service Commission by the officers of public utilities, be justified. But it is important to know whether Chairman Ainey also was given and accepted money or other valuable considerations from other public utilities, and if so, from which utilities. It is far less significant to uncover the reprehensible conduct of an individual and to punish him for it, than it is to ascertain whether that conduct was or was not part of a system.

It is at least as necessary to discover what other public utilities, if there are any others, have been guilty of bribery as it is to learn what members of the Public Service Commission, if there are any others, have accepted bribes.

The guilt of Chairman Ainey is of great consequence, but it sinks almost to insignificance in comparison with the question it raises whether the bribery in this case is part of a system through which the public utilities of this state have obtained favors to which they had no right. If it is because of such a system that they have been able to extort some hundreds of millions, if not a billion or two, of dollars over and above a fair return from the people of this commonwealth, that fact ought to be known.

Unfair Profit Plot

One thing is already clear. It is that the regular practices of certain of the utility companies have been such as to raise the question whether they are in fact utilities for the service of the public or conspiracies for unfair private profit. Only investigation can disclose how many of the state's so-called public utilities are guilty of the same practices and tarred with the same stick.

This case is given increased significance, and importance by the fact that Chairman Ainey is the most prominent and widely-known public service commissioner in America. He has been a member of the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania since May 20, 1915, and its chairman since August 20, 1915. He was vice president of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners in 1924 and president in 1925, and has held office longer than any other public service commissioner in the United States. He was one of three permanently-elected delegates from the United States to the conference of the Inter-parliamentary Union in Paris, France, August 25-30, 1927. It was for the purpose of attending this conference that he crossed the ocean, as already noted.

National Issue

We may have pity for the offender who at the end of a life of good repute is discovered not to have deserved it. I have no desire to insist unduly upon the heinousness of his offense. What interests me in this matter, and what will chiefly interest the people of Pennsylvania, is that the facts already made known open the road to a settlement in the public interest of the public utility problem in Pennsylvania and if in Pennsylvania, then ultimately in the whole United States.

Before the evidence herewith transmitted was known, the investigation of the Federal Trade Commission had shown that public utilities were in the habit of propagandizing in public schools "from the eighth grade up," that they acquired newspapers, subsidized teachers and lecturers, dictated the tone and contents of school books, augmented the incomes of school officials, established professorships in universities, contributed to women's clubs and even undertook to control the preaching of ministers of religion. Bribery, however, is a step beyond all of these.

Bribery of a judge on the bench is universally and rightly regarded as one of the most despicable of crimes. In most cases of bribery, however, while the principles of justice are outraged, the number of persons who suffer injustice is extremely small. But in such a case as this justice is denied to the whole people. There is no one of any occupation, in any station in life, of either sex or any age, but is daily and powerfully effected in comfort, safety and welfare by justice or injustice from public utilities. Therefore, such a case as this is far worse than the bribery of a judge.

Confidence Shaken

I am deeply aware of the national importance of this evidence. The people of the United States have chosen the method of regulation of public utilities as against public ownership. But regulation cannot survive unless it can hold the confidence of the people. Nothing could more effectively destroy such confidence than the knowledge of practices like those which are now disclosed.

No public utility question of equal importance to this has ever arisen in any state since regulation became a public policy. Few matters of equal importance to the people of the state have ever come before the Senate of Pennsylvania. I believe I am well within the fact when I say that the people will expect the Senate to take full advantage of this opportunity to act for the protection of the people and in behalf of the millions who must pay the bills.

Garner to Advise Man Curtis Held 'Too Dumb'

UVALDE, Tex., July 26.—(AP.)—Speaker John N. Garner is both able and willing to explain farm relief to A. J. Livingston, of Spencer, Ia., whom Vice President Curtis in 1928 considered "too damned dumb" to understand the subject.

Mrs. Garner, who acts as secretary to the Democratic vice presidential nominee, so notified Livingston in a letter written yesterday. She answered for the Speaker, she said, because he was resting out in the woods.

Girl Stowaway Daughter of Ex-President

LISBON, Portugal, July 26.—(AP.)—Senorita Elena Araujo, 18, whose father's life as President of Salvador was not without its moments of excitement, is enjoying an adventure of her own.

Yesterday when the British schooner Shoal Fisher sailed out of the port of Manchester she was hidden aboard as a stowaway. Not until the vessel reached Lisbon was her presence discovered. She was handed over to the police, who placed her in custody of the British Consul.

Recently when President Araujo's government was overthrown he fled to Guatemala and sent his family abroad. Life in England, said the young woman today, was quieter than she likes, so she stowed away in a spirit of adventure.

YOU SEE, EVEN A CHILD NOTICES "B.O." HE'S A GOOD NEIGHBOR AND A FINE FELLOW BUT I WISH SOMEBODY WOULD TELL HIM ABOUT LIFEBUOY
NEXT DAY
WHY, PEGGY, WHAT ARE YOU WASHING YOUR DOLL WITH LIFEBUOY FOR?
'CAUSE I DON'T WANT HER TO HAVE THAT NASTY OLD "B.O."
WAS PEGGY HINTING THE OTHER DAY WHEN SHE MEITIONED "B.O."? ANYWAY LIFEBUOY'S A GRAND SOAP. SUCH LATHER... I'M ALWAYS GOING TO USE IT!
NO "B.O." NOW— and what a difference!
SO PEGGY'S OVER THERE AGAIN!
YES, HE'S A BIG FAVORITE NOW WITH EVERYBODY. THAT IS THE GIRL HE'S BEEN IN LOVE WITH SO LONG. SHE'S JUST PROMISED TO MARRY HIM.

"Perspiry" weather . . . more "B.O." danger

(body odor)

N.Y. Police Drama on WCAE; 'Skyscraper' Repeated; Baritone Returns

Four dramatizations are booked on the air tonight to delight those fans who have a penchant for turning down the lights, esconcing themselves in an easy chair, lighting up a cigaret and tuning in on a thrilling mystery or a delightful romance.

The police dramatization listed on Walter O'Keefe's cigaret hour on WCAE at 10 o'clock, "The Fighting Jeweler," literally tears the cover from the underworld, disclosing the methods of New York gangdom. The story — a true one — tells how a Broadway merchant, once the victim of a clever gang burglary, took measures to protect himself and his property.

Mr. O'Keefe

"Murder on Monday," by Charles Barry, which deals with the disappearance of Peter Perley, a bookmaker, whose body is found later in the bottom of an abandoned sandpit, is the Crime Club offering on WJAS at 9:30 tonight.

In response to numerous requests, "Skyscraper," a thrilling drama of a riveter, working 30 stories above the ground, who falls to his death, and of his thoughts during the seconds of his downward rush, is presented on KDKA at 8.

"A Pass to Pekin," a story by Vincent Sheenan, is heard on WJAS tonight at 6:30.

Edward Davies, baritone, formerly a regular feature of the Musical Memories program on KDKA, returns tonight at 9 o'clock. He is starred with Alice Mock, soprano, an orchestra and a trio.

Program Pointers

Cyrilla Tuite, Alice Abbott and Ford Miller, of WCAE, and Alfhild Larson, "Fashion Queen of America," will be starred in a unique fashion review and broadcast from Frank and Seder's store over WCAE tomorrow from 12:15 to 12:45 p. m. The program marks the store's display of winter coats by mannequins.

Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Clubs and Club Women, is guest speaker on KQV's "Pittsburgh Today" program tonight at 8 . . . Ben Bernie and all the lads take a few weeks' vacation following their program on WJAS tonight at 9. They return to the air early in September . . . Georgie Price offers an impersonation of the late Eddie Foy, singing a favorite ditty, "Everything Depends on Money," during his WJAS program at 7:45.

Mrs. Stahlman

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit present an all-request program of songs popular 25 years ago on WCAE tonight at 8.

The third of a series of four Toscanini Fund Concerts over a Columbia chain is heard on WJAS today from 3:30 to 5 with Jeffrey Harris, former director of the British Opera Company, conducting.

James Douglass, Akron, O., tenor, makes his bow before the KDKA microphone tonight at 8:30. At 7:15 on the same station, Charles Shotts, graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology and later a student in Berlin, presents a piano recital of Saint-Saens and Lizst compositions.

Incidents occuring in the life of Thomas Jefferson, including his romance with Martha Wayles Skelton, who later became his wife, and his associations with Patrick Henry, are depicted during the "Sheer Romance" presentation from KDKA over an NBC network at 6:30.

Ray Perkins discusses "early rising" and disposes with Agamemnon Lipschultz, dentist who persists in saying "This won't hurt a bit," through the medium of his Firing Squal on WCAE at 7:30.

Fan Fare

Mrs. Paul Whiteman (Margaret Livingston) has finished her first literary attempt . . . It's called "The First Hundred Pounds are the Hardest" . . . It will have an introduction by O. O. McIntyre, be dedicated to the 20,000,000 fat people in the world and will be published by Ray Long this fall . . . The microphone used by King Albert, of Belgium, in his recent address, was made solely for his use . . . Robert L. Ripley has returned from a trip to the midget independent countries of Europe.

Mrs. Whiteman

Who wants an ear wiggler for a radio program? One recently offered his services to an NBC station, explaining that he also could make them click.

Radio artists have become seafaring . . . Among those who devote their spare time to aquatic activities are Phillips Lord, James Melton, James Wallington, Norman Sweetser, Rosaline Greene and Peter Dixon.

The most rehearsed program on the air is the cigaret police drama . . . Although it runs about 20 minutes in length, more than 30 hours a week are devoted to rehearsals.

John H. Harris, general manager of the Warner Brothers' theaters, and A. J. Schaumann, head keeper at the Highland Park zoo, will be heard during a special program heralding the opening of Frank Buck's jungle picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," at the Warner Theater Friday, on KDKA tomorrow at 2:45 p. m. Schaumann, a friend of Buck's for years, will discuss details of the life of the noted hunter, who supplies zoos throughout the country with ferocious animals, and who took the jungle picture without firing a shot.

6 Reasons Why
Your Triangle Grocer
can offer
BETTER GROCERIES AT BETTER PRICES
1 The Triangle Grocers' Association is not a chain, though they buy together in carload lots to bring you better prices.
2 Because each store is owned and managed on the spot, there is no high salaried executive force to maintain.
3 Each store has a personal, friendly interest in each customer and in its help. Employees stay longer, and know you better, because it's more pleasant work.
4 Being strictly local in scope, each store is in better position to watch market conditions and take advantage of every chance to save for you.
5 They are interested, not in single sales, but in permanent satisfied customers. That's why they take pains to make friends—to give full weight—and satisfaction.
6 Charge and delivery service enable the maintenance of steady, profitable volume at smaller individual profit.

"Her Nerves are Ragged . . . She Can't Face Another Day of Work"

"I can't go through another day . . . oh, what is the matter? What shall I do"? Did you ever feel this way yourself?
Nearly Nervous Prostration
DO you know her . . . this poor woman who wakes up as tired as she went to bed?
Her head is still aching . . . her nerves are ragged . . . she's on the verge of tears as she faces another day of work.
"I can't go through it again . . . I can't. Oh, what is the matter? What shall I do?" she cries.
How many young women are fast approaching a nervous breakdown because they let suffering due to female weakness rob them of their strength and health.
In offices or in their homes, they drive themselves, working "on their nerve." Hoping against hope that tomorrow they will feel better . . . but instead they become more and more prostrated.
It is a double tragedy because it is so unnecessary.
Nature did not mean women to suffer so cruelly. If they would only try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound! It has befriended women against their "peculiar" troubles for over 50 years.
It brings soothing, comforting relief . . . gently corrects through its strengthening tonic action the cause of the headaches and backaches that wear you out. Drives away the awful lassitude that kills ambition and makes life a burden.
This simple, safe remedy has justly earned its place in the Family Medicine Cabinet.
Won't you listen to the testimony of thousands of women who use it?

SPANKING NEAR, BOY VANISHES

Promise of three spankings caused George Davis, 10, of 333 W. Fifteenth avenue, Homestead, to leave home, a week ago, his father, Patrick Davis, told Missing Persons Bureau, today, when he asked the bureau to search for the lad. Things I Never Knew Till Now

(Skipping is permitted.)

That Dorothy Peterson, who plays most of the mother roles on the screen, is only 24.

That champagne was invented 250 years ago, by a preacher!

That the biggest movie box office draw is Mickey Mouse, Marie Dressler is second and Jackie Cooper third.

That California now grows pink lemons.

That the government is experimenting with a tasteless mucilage made from sweet potatoes for postage stamps. (I'll take vanilla.)

That they say that Hollywood's most perfect movie face is Billie Dove's, who is prettier than she photographs.

That if they divvied up all the wealth and income of this country, your 125,000,000th share would be about $500.

That the skin of an apple contains six times more vitamins than the meat around the core. (Oh, somebody must've told him!)

That Irene Castle, the greatest ballroom dancer of her time, and of these times for that matter, never took a lesson in her life.

That a 9-year-old boy, Johnny J. Jones, owns a real circus. He inherited it from his father, and it bears his pop's name.

That at a Scotch shipyard (this is no gag) they christened a new ship by breaking a cocoanut on it instead of wine.

That the first speakasy in America is said to have been the 50-50 Club over a garage on 54th, near 6th Ave.

That the late Eddie Foy didn't click until he was 40.

That before Kreisler, the greatest of the violinists, crashed the musical heavens, he was a prosperous surgeon.

That farmers have found that a radio in the barn keeps the cows quiet when the milking machines are used. They like crooners and orchestras, but sopranos drive them crazy.

That the largest bar in the world is now in Jersey City—and you approach it first by entering a phone booth.

That the price of a Russian wife of high birth in Shanghai is now $2.50 in our money.

That you can kick a man in London, but if you slap him in the face, you can be sent to jail.

That a huge and handsome clock in a local actor's club is the gift of the pawnbroker with whom members do busines.

That when Congress member Ruth Pratt lived in Brooklyn, neighbors called her "skinny." Now she is "tall and stately."

That they say any player of a reed instrument, particularly the oboe, will in time have his mind affected.

That Charles Cochran, the London producer, was once secretary to Richard Mansfield, who fired him because he didn't deliver a note to Margaret Anglin on time. (And now looka!)

That if you jet some air into a cocoanut—and then insert a bit of sugar—and let it rest on ice for a while—oh, boy!

That lemon juice is swelegant in black coffee.

That a python can go without food for three years.

That it was Dolly Madison, wife of the fourth President, who introduced bathtubs into the White House.

That Andrew Jackson, however, promptly tossed them out, claiming they represented something obnoxious to the citizens!

That there are 60,804 towns in the United States. It would take you 166 years to visit each of them.

That it is harder for women to overcome the hooch habit.

That the time Americans spend daily waiting for the red light to turn green is held equivalent to 35 years.

That sidewalks at Meshed, Persia, are payed with old tombstones placed face upward. (Ma-ma!)

That the millenium has come to Jackson, Miss., which now has a barber shop operated entirely by deaf mutes!

That a fashionable girls' school in Chicago sets one day aside when the gals may "dunk" or eat the way they do at home.

That a scientist now claims to have discovered that you can tell the age of a woman by one hair from her head.

Madge Evans, Producer Agree

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.

In a final conference, Madge Evans and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have ironed out their difficulties and the blonde star goes back to work there as soon as she finishes the Al Jolson picture.

She will have a new long-term contract, which should make everybody happy. Because things were going very smoothly until that salary disagreement came up.

Madge has made only one picture—her present one—away from M. G. M. since she was brought out here a year ago to play opposite Ramon Novarro in "Son of India." Catching on immediately, she appeared in rapid succession opposite Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and William Haines.

Madge Evans

Her new deal at the studio assures her of important consideration on the M. G. M. production schedule.

Meanwhile, she and Tom Gallery still are seen everywhere together and Hollywood looks for a marriage there some time in the future.

BOULEVARD TALK

If he hadn't signed that contract at M. G. M., Director Roland Brown was all set to duck out of Hollywood on a tanker. Now that Charles Bickford has calmed down, Roland is the film colony's first rebel. He has fought with every studio he's worked at. But because he really has something to give, the producers keep signing him.

Greta Nissen is upset because of persistent reports in the East that she will appear in a Broadway musical. She denies it emphatically. Everything seems to be running smoothly now between Greta and Weldon Heyburn . . . John Miljan is building a room onto his house to give that new baby more room to grow in . . . Herbert Music In a Color Picture

By GEORGE SEIBEL

As a reminder of the day when Hollywood thought operetta was its legitimate prey, and that great composers would soon be writing music exclusively for the talking, singing and dancing pictures, a film in Technicolor made from Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste," is at the Avenue Cinema this week. It is called "Kiss Me Again," that being the title of the popular tune from the operetta. Bernice Claire has the principal role, and she's good to look at, besides having a voice of charm and color. It is a very faithful presentation of the old favorite, with all the minor values and major defects of the film operetta. Chief of the defects are the flim-flam of the color and the almost total loss of comedy—as for the values, they are the possibility of massive scenery and elaborate dance numbers. And there's Victor Herbert's music, of course, which can't be spoiled.

Mr. Seibel

Newman travel pictures from Paris are the best thing in this week's bill at the Avenue Cinema.

Joe Cook, who merely had to tell why he wouldn't "imitate four Hawaiians" to get laughs over here, couldn't even get a chance to say that he wouldn't, let alone give the reason why, in London. According to reports that have come over from the other side, Cook, one of our favorite comedians, was given what is known as "the bird" in dear old Lunnon, where he went to be the star of "Fanfare," a production of John Murray Anderson. Although we frequently see plays in America with all-English casts, London isn't so tolerant or so reciprocal. Casts over there, by regulation, must be at least 75 per cent British. Joe was hooted at the opening of the show. English members of the cast urged him to make a curtain speech, but he was howled down by cries of "go back, Yankee," "Speak English" and "we want British comedians." In an interview, Joe is quoted as saying that the English newspapers insist that there is no such attitude as is indicated by his reception, pointing to the number Americans to be seen on the stage, and this is answered by Mr. Cook, stating there is not a "name" among them.

The United Booking Office, handling the stage attractions of the Shubert and Erlanger interests, long rivals, will begin functioning Monday, August 1 . . . BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By MARK HELLINGER

Publicity

IF YOU WANT publicity, there are plenty of methods of achieving it. You can shoot a radio crooner or, if you want to go in for something on a little higher plane, you can sit on a flagpole. Through the medium of publicity, you can find greatness or baseness—and aside from demanding that you permit your linen to be laundered in public view, publicity asks little of its recipients.

Garbo's mysteriousness, Daddy Browning's collection of theses and thoses, The million-dollar underpinnings of Dietrich. Jimmy Durante's chnozzle . . . all of these are part of the grsat game of publicity. Even my photograph, sometimes printed here and there—and taken on one of those rare occasions when I was able to boast both a shave and a clean collar, is part of the same game. Just a minute. After looking at the photograph, I take back that part about the collar.

At any rate, publicity is a kill or cure business. It kills the patient far more often than it cures him, but the mugs never find that out until it's too late. And now that we have had sufficient moralizing for one session, we will turn to the story of Joe Blimp, our character for today.

Joe had always been blessed with Big Ideas—to hear him tell it. Ever since that glorious tenth birthday when he had exchanged a pair of cracked hockey sticks for a mangey guinea pig, Joe had decided that he was cut out for Big Business.

After leaving high school, he enrolled in every correspondence school he could find. He subscribed for everything and anything that would develop what he termed his "natural business sense." In two years he had accumulated a library that contained everything from Prof. Gyp's "Pep Development" in 10 easy lessons to "How to Become A Millionaire" in 10 still easier lessons.

At the age of 20, Joe felt certain that he had more than the equipment necessary to crash the gates of success. If he didn't feel like crashing, he'd simply hurdle them. That was Joe. So, with a clean collar and the last lesson of "Every Man His Own Boss" in his handbag, he arrived in the city of New York.

Somehow or other, things didn't work out quite as Joe had planned. According to his "Business Psychology" course taken in ten simple lessons, all a man had to do to be big in this world was to think big. Joe stuck to that policy. He thought so big when he first hit our village that it took three months and a tightening waistline to make him realize that all he could hope for was a job at twenty bucks a week.

Our hero didn't remember any similar situation in any of his courses. The professors had failed to instruct him on the movements of a young man who expected $1,000 a week and was offered only $20. So he did what he thought was best. He took the $20 a week.

Joe, however, was plenty dissatisfied. After a year of earnest labor, he was still earning the same salary. His boss hadn't even made him a vice-president as yet, and that was really something to worry about. He puzzled over the problem until his eyes began to bulge like a reformer's hip-pocket. And suddenly the solution hit him. What he needed was publicity!

That was the magic word. Publicity! What a fool he had been not to think of it before. Publicity made men big. Publicity trebled incomes. Publicity created fame. Publicity and success went hand in hand. That was going to be his cue from that moment on. He was going after publicity in a big way.

And he did, by golly. Never was a would-be space snatcher more persistent—but never was anyone more unlucky. He walked in the forefront of every gathering, for the protest marches of the Communists to the Beer Parade, and received nothing but sore feet. When Jimmy Walker greeted a celebrity at City Hall, Joe rushed so strenuously to get into the pictures that somebody handed him a black eye.

But Joe Blimp wouldn't give up. Not our Joe. He tried a fake suicide by jumping in the river, and got nothing but a reprimand from a cop for bathing in a restricted area.

It was no go. Joe couldn't seem to connect with the publicity he wanted, so he turned in desperation to another angle. He went in for the testimonial racket.

For many months he wrote to the vendors of patent medicines. In flowery language, he described his miraculous recovery from an assorted collection of ills that included fallen arches, halitosis, dandruff, and so forth. Furthermore, he wrote, he would be happy to give them the finest kind of testimonial if they would print his photograph. But alas—once again nobody seemed interested.

By this time, Joe was not to be daunted. He branched out. And the list of ills from which he had recovered now included athlete's foot, eczema, rheumatoid anthritis, epilepsy and valvular disease of the heart. On one glorious morning, his persistency was rewarded. A backache outfit accepted his offer. They exchanged a crate of their pills for one of Joe's photos and a recommendation that took him almost a week to write.

Success at last! A month passed—one of the most agonizing that Joe had ever known—and the advertisement finally came out. It was a quarter of a page, no less, in one of the most widely read journals in New York. Can you imagine our hero's ecstatic state?

True, his beautifully written testimonial that had covered two full pages had been cut to three lines. And also true, the advertisers had taken the liberty of adding a pen drawing of Joe before taking the remedy, in which he was represented as a bent old man with bow legs and a strained expression. But Joe forgave all that. For there, right in the center of the announcement was his picture. What a thrill!

There was no holding Joe Blimp in the office that day. He walked around as though he were a hero of the first magnitude. It had taken him a long time to learn, but he had finally achieved his goal. Publicity had put him on the road to bigger and better things. He told the clerk beside him to watch his smoke from that day on.

Just before he left that night, Joe was told that the boss wanted to see him. Joe arose and winked at his desk mate.

"I told you so," he said. "The ball's rolling already."

He entered the office of the big shot. The latter man looked up at Joe.

"Nice picture you had in the paper today, Mr. Blimp," he asserted.

"Thank you, sir," replied Joe modestly. "I'm trying my best to get ahead. Just a little publicity, you know."

The boss nodded.

"I know," he returned easily. "And I also know something that you don't know. My employes are not permitted to make fools of themselves. You're fired!" . . .

RIIS LOSES ROAD BUILDING RIGHT

Limiting the authority of Parks Director Paul B. Riis, the County Commissioners have put the Department of Highways, Bridges and Tunnels in charge of road building in the parks. Riis objected at the commissioners' session yesterday, saying:

"Road building in the parks cannot be done without considering the road's reference to the landscape and our program of conservation of natural resources."

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern told Riis:

"You are not a road builder. You are a landscape man. That system at the parks has been a hodge-podge and we are going to put it on a business basis."

BOARD FORBIDS JOB SHIFTING

Shifting county employes between departments has been forbidden by the commissioners.

Director of Parks Paul B. Riis yesterday informed the board that employes of his department had been borrowed by the Department of Property and Supplies and the Bureau of Investigations and Claims. In a letter he said:

"When these requests are made I am asked to carry men on the payroll, which has always been done by me in simple faith."

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern moved that:

"Any change or request for men to be taken off one job and put on another is to be done only by written order from the commissioners or their chief clerk."

OAK HILL, W. Va., July 26.—(AP.)—Charged with slaying Nathan Elliott, a neighbor, David Jones and W. C. Jones were arrested at Pax near here and held for grand jury action.

Corp. M. M. Gladwell of the state police said Elliott was shot at his farm home near Pax as the climax of a drinking party. Mayor H. C. Wollwine, of Pax, said David Jones admitted he picked up a rifle and fired at Elliott after the latter attacked E. C. Jones with a corn knife.

TEACHERS WILL GET PART PAY

CHICAGO, July 26.—(Universal.)—On the eve of his departure for Europe in an effort to restore his shattered health, Mayor A. J. Cermak obtained $2,500,000 from the banks yesterday for the city's 14,000 unpaid school teachers.

This will pay the teachers only for the last two weeks in March. They still will be owed $17,250,000 for April, May and June.

City employes, including the police and firemen, are owed $11,400,000. They will be paid $1,900,000 later this week. The Mayor obtained the loan of $2,500,000 in a conference with leading bankers after assurance had been given that the Board of Education would cut its budget substantially.

Gibson May Share In Naval Parley

PARIS, July 26.—(AP.)—Ambassador Hugh Gibson, leader of the United States delegation at the recent sessions of the world disarmament conference at Geneva, probably will go to London in August to participate in naval conversations provided for under the disarmament resolutions, it was learned here today.

In League of Nations circles it was explained the disarmament conference had not disbanded, but will resume its sessions next fall.

GIVE TO Charity BEFORE YOU GIVE UP THE GHOST!

NINE-TENTHS of the history of generous impulses can be summed up in the single word: POSTPONED—think, for example, how many millions for charity are locked up in the Wills of the living waiting for the testators to die!—and think how much more charitable it would be if some of those frozen funds were working now to alleviate human suffering and distress—how much greater is the charity that gives before dying instead of dying before giving!—why not do a little more while you're here and leave a little less when you go?

The DE PAUL INSTITUTE would like to be remembered in your Will but that does not help the DE PAUL INSTITUTE right now—it cannot take care of today's burdens with tomorrow's bequests—its needs are imperative and immediate—it must raise $40,000.00 a year to carry on its Christ-like activity of making the deaf to hear and the mute to speak—and it asks you in your charity to draw a check in behalf of the great charitable work that every hour draws upon it for support.

Bishop Boyle has ordered a collection for this great undertaking in every Catholic Church on Sunday, July 31st, the day on which the Gospel relates the miracle of Christ healing the deaf mute. A dollar from every one in the Diocese of Pittsburgh would carry on this noble charity. If you can both hear and speak, may we count upon your contribution of at least a dollar next Sunday?

SMART BATHING SUIT STYLE ADAPTED TO AFTERNOON FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 26.—We are in the bathing suit age of fashions. Modern clothes from aprons to evening dresses, seem to have come into the home via the beach. Bathing suit models are in evidence in practically every type of clothes that women wear today.

TIGHTLY FITTED but pliable fabrics, lines that mark clearly the natural figure and low-cut backs, appear in dresses that are worn at lunches, at bridge and at dinner, as well as for dancing and the theater.

CHANEL, always intensely interested in simplifying modern fashions, was one of the first to make the new backless afternoon dresses. Designed for either town or country, these frocks are of the type so adjustable that they may be worn at practically any hour of the day. She develops them in simple materials cotton, light-weight silks, shantungs or other fabrics that are washable or easily cleaned—and puts them into practical colors and patterns. Many of them are prints — dots, gingham checks or little flower designs. The colors range from brilliant reds and bright blues for country wearing to more sober beiges, grays and dark blues for town.

THE SKETCH shows how the same costume takes on an entirely different air when worn without its jacket. Its bathing suit back immediately classes it as a country or beach dress, yet the skirt, with its yoke bands and front plaits, is formal enough to make the dress suitable for bridge, when the matching jacket is worn.

* * *

THE LITTLE hat, a tipped-up sailor, is made of the same material as the dress. It is bright red, dotted with white, and is a Chanel version of the shantung weave, chantonel.

Sensitiveness Is a Petty And Tiresome Vice

Are you always imagining insults and "getting your feelings hurt"?

That's Freda's trouble. Of course, she doesn't admit that's what wrong. According to her, the world is all lined up agin' her. And for some reason—unknown to her—people are always stepping on her pet corns, even though they should know that she is "so sensitive that everything hurts her so," because—

"The least little thing makes me cry," she moans.

Know anyone like that? Sure, you do. And what ails 'em. Are they finer and more sensitive than the rest of us? Or only—?

"Dearest Sally—

"I wonder if you can help me; you help so many people. And I wonder if you can't say something about how thoughtless people are, most of them at least, about other people who are sensitive and easily hurt.

OTHERS INCONSIDERATE

"I am like that. I always have been. I guess I was just born more sensitive than other folks, and no one will try to understand the way I feel. It makes me so discouraged!

"I always try to consider other people, and I never do things that I think will hurt their feelings. But are they as careful and considerate about me? No, they are not. And that's why I am writing this.

"It isn't really any one thing that I am writing about, but just scores of them. Ever since I can remember—I am 23 and not bad looking, if I do say it myself—people have sort of—well, done little things to hurt me.

"For instance, my family. If they get some little fool joke on me, they'll laugh about it to everybody, even though they know that it hurts me so and makes me cry. And not long ago my sister and I went to another town to visit, and while we were there she and I both wanted to have a little fun, so we decided to give a little party. It was at my aunt's house.

EASILY HURT

"And then the fun—for my sister, I guess—started. They wouldn't do anything the way I wanted it done. She and my cousin cooked things up together, and when I wanted a certain kind of flowers, and wanted some friends of mine invited that they didn't care particularly for, it was promptly voted down.

"And when I tried to make them understand the way I felt, my sister accused me of 'acting silly.' I cried, but that didn't do any good, so I stayed away from the party. It was spoiled for me. I couldn't have enjoyed myself.

But did they understand? They did not. They treated me as if I was the one who had gummed up the works.

"Please help me. What can I do? Why are people like that? What's wrong? I am so easily hurt, but no one will understand. I cried for three days when I got home. I couldn't help it. "FREDA."

What's wrong? Just one thing, kid—Li'l Freda! Yep! I know you're going to weep another bucket of tears, and accuse me, too, of being "heartless," but it's the truth. You, yourself, are what ails you.

You, yourself, are so important in your own eyes that every trifling irritation seems to you one of life's major tragedies. Your egotism is so inflamed that it has become a regular hangnail, and you can think of nothing else.

EXASPERATES PEOPLE

But aren't other people inconsiderate? Possibly; but what of it? How can they possibly consider you every minute, when they have a million other affairs on their minds? And why should you expect perfect consideration in this big, bustling world? Nobody gets such consideration. Everybody has to take things as they come, and learn to be a good sport. Why can't you?

As a matter of fact, you yourself are probably the most selfish and inconsiderate person in your whole circle of acquaintances. You are making a racket out of your sensitiveness, and exasperating everybody with your yawps and howls.

Get wise to yourself, and get human. Stop concentrating on your own personal reactions. Stop blowing up if you can't have your own way. Be your size, kid!

New Postal Rates Not Such a Hardship, Fay King Believes

By FAY KING

One cent has been added to letter postage. A 2-cent letter now needs 3 cents.

But when one appreciates what happiness, comfort and consolation a letter to a loved one can bring, it seems that a letter is worth any price.

It is hard for us to realize that there was a time when there was no such thing as postage stamps. In those days letters were carried by friends or persons going to the place one wished to send some word.

It was uncertain, and there were long waits for answers.

Now a few pennies in stamps will carry letters all over the world, and nothing can take the place of a personally written private letter, to read and re-read and treasure.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

For Health, Walk

For some unfortunates various forms of exercise are more harmful than beneficial, but there is at least one exercise that can be safely practiced by everyone. It costs nothing, yet I can think of no better exercise than walking. Golf and some other forms of recreation are expensive, but walking requires no equipment beyond a good pair of shoes and the willingness to indulge in it.

Dr. Copeland

Walking once was popular. Walking clubs and well organized hiking parties were heard of throughout the country. But this beneficial form of exercise unfortunately has declined in popularity. Few of us walk today unless we are compelled to do so. The street car, the train and the automobile take us to our destinations.

I believe the health of the nation has suffered as a result of some of man's inventions. Poor complexion, indigestion, insomnia, headache and irritability are signs of poor health caused by lack of proper exercise and physical activity. Machines should not take the place of feet and well-directed muscular effort.

Every individual should make it a practice to walk at least one mile each day. Instead of riding every day, walk to work occasionally. Your daily duties will prove more interesting and less fatiguing.

As you walk, keep the body erect, the head up and the abdomen in. The chest should be high and the shoulders thrown back. The arms should swing freely from the shoulders. Point the toes straight forward and walk on the balls of your feet.

Perhaps you have been suffering from lack of appetite, poor digestion, constipation and loss of sleep. I can think of no better cure for these ailments than walking. It will stimulate your appetite, aid indigestion and promote proper elimination. Be outdoors and in the sunlight as much as possible.

Do not permit yourself to become prematurely old. Walking will help you avoid ill health and those constitutional complaints that hasten old age. See to it that you walk more than has been your practice, taking pains to walk in the manner described.

Many persons complain of pain and discomfort when walking. Sometimes this is due to lack of muscular development of the feet, and can be overcome by gradually increased periods of exercise. Increase your walks slowly. Do not walk too much all of a sudden. Make sure that your shoes are comfortable and your feet in good health—that bunions, corns or other foot disabilities are corrected before long walks are taken.

At a later time I will tell you about the care of the feet and how to choose proper shoes. In the meantime use your feet and legs more than you have.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Noel Arrives for the Shore Dinner

The sensation of sitting on a powder barrel watching firecrackers explode around me diminished somewhat as the members of the farmhouse family and our youthful guests gathered in excited and apparently joyous reunion around the table, where Katie and Mrs. Ticer served the "shore dinner" which I had planned for a welcome home to Lillian, Marion, Mary and the three guests, Carolyn and Ronald Brixton and Bob Trevellan.

Even Ronald, who had the most cause for mental disturbance, did full justice to the steamed clams, the lobsters, the broiled chickens and the sweet corn — crowning triumph of Jim's autumn garden—which were the main dishes of the dinner. As I covertly watched him, I paid tribute not only to his self-control, but to the finesse with which he was approaching the problem I had given him—that of lessening his attention to Marion and paying court to Mary.

I had made no change in the usual seating arrangement when the Brixtons were present with Ronald next to Marion, but I had placed Mary upon the other side of him, and without appearing to do so, had left enough space between Mary's place and mine so that a chair for Noel could be slipped unobstrusively into position for him when he should arrive.

There are few things to equal the unconscious cruelty of a girl, temporarily infatuated with one man, toward the one who previously has monopolized her attention. I guessed the "snippiness" which Marion had treated Ronald during the last week, and also surmised that the trip down by themselves in the small car, for which Lillian had arranged, had been packed with unpleasantness.

THE DESIRED EFFECT

But, with the predatory instinct of all felines, including women, Marion, looking over the table and seeing a Jill for every Jack except for herself and Mary, ranged on either side of Ronald, patiently determined to monopolize his attention during the dinner, as she invariably had done ever since they first met.

I could have laughed aloud in glee, not malicious, but satisfied at the salutary effect being produced by my little scheme when Marion's lively face became a positive interrogation point of puzzlement as Ronald, with the perfect but deadly courtesy which the modern, socially trained young man can affect toward a girl who does not appeal to him, answered her every question, saw to it that all her dinner table wants were supplied, but turned from her repeatedly to exchange laughing, rapid-fire banter with Mary—the sort of thing from which all but the two concerned are excluded.

The sound of a motor in the driveway, followed a few seconds later by the peal of the doorbell, brought us all to attention—those in the secret of Noel's expected arrival, and those who simply had the curious interest that is always stirred by any unexpected visitor at dinner time.

"Meester Noel Veritzen," Katie announced sonorously, and the next instant Noel, a bit perturbed, with his eyes seeking for Mary, was in our midst, the men rising and greeting him rousingly, the women smiling and reaching out welcoming hands to him.

INVITED TO EAT

"Oh, I didn't know you were at dinner," he said, with every appearance of truth, although he flushed slightly as he caught my eye. " I thought it was too late."

"Why we aren't more than half through, and I'll have Katie bring you in the first course right away. Here!"—I moved my chair to the right—"Tuck a chair right in here, between Mary and me."

"But I've already dined," he faltered, mendaciously.

"Ye-ah, I know how you dine when you're motoring, young man," Dicky said. "I've been with you. A couple of hot dogs and an ice cream cone. Sit down before I have to come around and put you down. I hate to inflate the egos of my frau and her cook, but this dinner is worth eating."

"I'm sure it is," Noel answered, and then, as always when he sees Mary, he fell silent, his eyes devouring her face. When at last he said softly, "Hello, Mary!" it was as if he were intoning a ritual.

The stage was now set for light comedy drama, with youthful players in the stellar roles, but we oldsters were unconsciously scheduled for grimmer business. No sooner had we settled down to our food again than we were once more interrupted, this time by a telegram for Harry Underwood, about which I felt an instinctive little premonition. That yellow envelope held exciting and vital things.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Tummy too big and hips spready? Lie face downward on the floor, lift up on hands and toes, lower the body slowly. Not easy, but good fun. Excellent for remodeling thighs that have got heavy and what it does to fatted calves is something grand and elegant. Tightens up muscles and muscles shake themselves free of fat cells.

Some years ago a cosmetic surgeon cooked up the idea of the permanet blush. It was to be achieved by means of the tattoo needle and red ink. The gals didn't fall into a frenzy about it. They're cautious these days. They figure that the beauty ill you know is better than the one you don't know. Beauty charlatans are losing out. Beautifying is based on hygienic principles. The jolly old bunkum stuff doesn't go any more.

ACCUSED MAN DECLARED NOT IN RADIO ACT

Denial that Euclid Wagner, 31, of 1236 Sheffield street, North Side, held by police in the wounding early Saturday of Harold Wester, 20, of 1106 West North avenue, had ever been a member of or was officially connected with the "Tennessee Ramblers" was issued today by Dick Hartman, originator and producer of the popular radio and theater act.

Hartman and his mountaineer musicians have been heard from every radio station in Pittsburgh since he conceived the idea two years ago of offering the quaint musical strains that are so pleasing to Tennessee "hill-billies." Hartman, who refers to himself and players as "hill-billies," tells you:

"Two years ago, radio entertainment attracted my attention. Being a native of Harman, Tenn., up in the mountains from Knoxville, it just struck me that what appeals to the mountaineer's unique musical taste would also be liked by other folks.

"So I formed the 'Ramblers,' but at first used some Hawaiians in the act. Then I figured all mountaineers would be better and changed the act to 'Dick and Ray,' later to 'Willy and Billy' followed by 'Briarhopper Boys,' and finally back to 'Tennessee Ramblers.'

"We've been playing in theaters, too, all around the tri-state section. I just try to keep the homey, simple atmosphere in the presentation. Don't use a continuity. Speak right out as if we were sitting around the livery stable back home. If you don't think people like it, why doggone, you ought to see the mail."

The average of several hundred letters daily attest the place Hartman, with "Hoss Thief" Harry, "Oklohoma Cy" and "Honey Gal," has won with radio listeners.

WALTHERS HEAR ORATIONS

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Election of officers and the start of an annual oratorical contest drew the attention today of delegates to the International Walther League convention.

Yesterday they heard speakers urge modern youth to gird itself for a fight against rising crime and corruption.

Results of the oratorical contest will be announced Wednesday after contestants complete their finals in various sections of the city where sectional league meetings are being held.

A resolutions committee report also was to be submitted today. Resolutions involve further reductions of the emergency budget, the inclusion of convention expenses in an international budget and other methods of business prudence.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Adequate Trump Support

It is rare, indeed, that a singleton trump—even a high honor—can be considered adequate support for partner's bid suit. There are, however, infrequent occasions—when the hands suggest freakish distribution, and the player who is to become the Declarer shows a marked preference for the suit—when the Responding Hand should permit play in a suit in which he has a singleton, if the singleton is an important honor, rather than take the partner back and force him to play the hand in a suit in which the trump distribution is much better, but in which the Declarer is marked with only four cards.

Team-of-four play affords at once the fairest and most decisive test of skill devised for Contract players. The proper test is a large number of boards with cumulative scoring, though the popular fancy is for scoring each board as a match.

A hand dealt at a team-of-four Duplicate game recently gave North a difficult choice in deciding the best eventual declaration for the combined hands, and upon his choice rested the result of the hand for the players concerned.

East—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North: ♠K 3 2 ♡K ◇Q J 8 6 5 4 2 ♣4 2
West: ♠9 6 ♡J 9 6 3 ◇9 7 ♣J 9 8 7 3
East: ♠J 10 8 7 ♡7 2 ◇A K 10 ♣A Q 10 5
South: ♠A Q 5 4 ♡A Q 10 8 5 4 ◇3 ♣K 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡ (1)	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠ (2)	Pass	3 ♠ (3)	Pass
4 ♡ (4)	Pass	Pass (5)	Pass

(1) First bidding the longer of two biddable suits.

(2) South would like to rebid hearts, but the bidding may become too crowded if he does not first show the fact that he has a shorter biddable spade suit.

(3) Although North's hand appears very weak, the heart King assumes new value in view of partner's bids. It has strength enough to justify giving South another chance.

(4) Disclosing South's strong preference for hearts, a suit for which he knows North does not have adequate support; otherwise, he would have given it rather than supporting the spades, as, by the order chosen for the bidding, South has already greater heart length. The Rebid of the hearts practically guarantees a very strong heart suit of five cards, or a weaker one of six—probably the latter.

(5) North has a difficult problem, and the decision is very close. Spades appear better to North, but he reasons South may quite likely be compelled to use part of his own trump strength for ruffing, in which case play at spades would be fatal, while the heart King will play an important part in the establishment of the trump suit in any event.

The seven of clubs was the Opening lead, and South won the return of the suit, and led a small diamond, which East won, returning a trump. South then returned to his own hand by ruffing a diamond, and followed with three additional rounds of trumps, forcing West to take the lead. East was compelled to retain his four spades to prevent the run of that suit, and West's next lead completed the squeeze begun by the run of the trumps.

Any lead made by West left East defenseless. It was essential that he retain the Ace of diamonds. West grasped the situation, and hoping against hope that it might relieve the tension, refrained from leading another club, as he knew his partner was void, and led a spade. The time factor, however, worked inexorably. South won with the spade Queen, and laid down his last trump. West's play was immaterial, but East was now without hope. To discard one of his remaining spades would establish the suit for the Declarer. To discard a diamond would establish the diamond in the Dummy.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

Please advise the correct Opening bid by Dealer, vulnerable, on the following hand:

♠A K Q 10 7 4 ♡J ◇A ♣K Q 9 5 3

Answer: One spade. The hand does not contain sufficient honor strength or playing-tricks to justify an Opening two spade bid, and an Opening three or four spade bid should not be made because of the two-suited nature of the holding. Furthermore, the hand is evidence of a distributional storm, and it is very unlikely that the bid of one spade will be passed by the other three players.

Mine Guard Stabbed To Death, Three Held

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 26.—(AP.)—Randolph Jenkins, 27, Negro mine guard, was stabbed to death last night on a road near the Everettville mine of the New England Fuel and Transportation Company.

Three men, Wilbert Massie, 31; Joe Orloff, 36, and Sam Opeck, 42, mine workers, were arrested. Detectives said they had been informed Jenkins and the trio had fought over mine conditions.

Houston Girl Hurled From Runaway Auto

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 26.—Hurled from an automobile when it got out of control on the Hill Church road early today, Frances Dedillion, 19, of Houston, was seriously injured. At Washington Hospital it was reported Miss Dedillion had suffered a probable fracture of the skull. Her escort, Wilson Tucker, 19, of Morganza, was arrested on a reckless driving charge. He escaped with slight bruises.

COUNTY TO FIX VOTE MACHINES FOR ELECTION

The county elections bureau is hiring three more experts to go over the voting machines to prepare them for use in the November election.

The County Commissioners yesterday authorized employment of H. N. Wood and two expert mechanics at $12.50 a day to prepare specifications so that Ray Sprigle, director of property and supplies, can advertise for repairs the machines are said to need.

According to Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank the machines need correction of straight party rack; changing of vote interlocking bar; reinforcing of base and legs; insertion of improved mica strips; correction of defect in curtain closing and checking of all counters.

Ray Dever, chief custodian of the voting machines, told the Commissioners:

"The machines are good, workable devices. They will do the work unless somebody goes into the polls with an ax or a knife determined to wreck them. With proper following of the instructions they will work. If we spend a lot more time examining them they won't be used in November. We should be getting started demonstrating them now. The repairs suggested are really not that, but improvements."

However, the Commissioners will proceed with the repairing and send the bill to the bonding company as decided a week ago on advice of County Solicitor J. P. Fife, after the bonding company notified the county it was through with the controversy.

Dates for Voters To Qualify for November Polls

Here are the dates on which residents of Allegheny County may qualify to vote for President and other offices at the November election:

September 7—Last day to be assessed for payment of poll taxes, a tax receipt being necessary to register.

September 8—First registration day in second and third-class cities, including Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton.

September 20—Second registration day.

October 8—Third and last registration day, also last day to pay poll taxes.

September 6 and 7—Register assessors will sit at polling places in boroughs and townships to list those who may have been omitted in house-to-house canvass.

'WILL ROGERS' IN FINAL TEST

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 26.—(AP.)—A deposed Governor and a county school teacher with the same name as Will Rogers, the humorist, today held the principal interest among candidates as Oklahoma voters participated in a run-off primary.

J. C. (Jack) Walton, attempting a political comeback for the fourth time since he was removed as Governor in 1923, is opposing A. S. J. Shaw, former state auditor and treasurer, for Democratic nomination to the Corporation Commission.

Rogers, whose vote in the first primary was not even counted by unofficial tabulators until someone discovered he had an amazing total, is pitted against Mrs. Mabel Bassett, state commissioner of charities, for Democratic nomination for congressman-at-large.

Motor Club Fights Change in Signs

The Highway Department's decision to paint all warning signals black and white would result in an increased hazard to motoring officials of the Pittsburgh Motor Club declared today. The change from the present colors of yellow and black would confuse drivers, the club said.

Boy Collides With Platform; Injured

Regis Kohnke, 13, son of Sergt. Joseph Kohnke, of Carrick Police Station, was in St. Joseph's Hospital today with a probable fracture of the skull, broken nose and cuts suffered when he ran into a loading platform of Armour & Co., at South Twenty-first and Carson streets, late yesterday. The platform had been placed across the street, Sergt. Kohnke said.

Martin Urged to Stay At Home in Campaign

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 26.—Republican State Chairman Martin, if he follows the advice of Republican leaders in Pennsylvania, will decline to act as eastern manager of the Republican national campaign, even if it should be directly offered. So far Martin has merely been under consideration for the post, along with some nationally-known political figures.

Mark Shields

Members of the Republican organization throughout the state hold that there will be sufficient activity in this state this year to warrant the full attention of the state chairman. They are vitally concerned about success in several congressional districts, and have told Martin that his first duty lies within Pennsylvania.

Should Martin become a national manager someone would be needed to direct the Pennsylvania campaign, and making that selection is fraught with difficulty and danger. Republicans representing a majority of congressional districts in the state are frank in notifying state headquarters that they wish an active campaign on behalf of their congressional candidates, and do not wish to experiment with a new director.

There are, however, some friends of Martin who would like to see him step into the national picture. Though state chairman for more than four years, and substituting as national committeeman from Pennsylvania at the last Republican convention, the state chairman is not widely known beyond the borders of the commonwealth among state leaders.

Help for Gubernatorial Ambition Is Seen

It is argued that bringing Martin into the national scene would enhance this prestige, and that the national administration might lend some assistance to his ambition to be governor of Pennsylvania.

In a primary campaign his friends could point to him as a nationally recognized figure in politics whose presence in the Governor's chair might cement friendly relations with Washington should Mr. Hoover be re-elected.

Another consideration, selfish among these friends, but natural in politics, is that Martin as Eastern manager of the Presidential campaign could not be charged with any failures within Pennsylvania to elect Republican Congressmen and members of the State Legislature.

That is no inconsiderable argument, as there are real fears of danger ahead. It is freely predicted that there will be more Democratic members of the Legislature than for a generation, many more than surprisedly landed in Harrisburg as a result of the big Al Smith vote in 1928.

In that campaign there were five Democratic members of the Lower House of the Assembly from Philadelphia, and one member of the Senate, the late Larry McCrossan, who caused a sensation by defeating Mrs. Flora Vare, sister-in-law of William S. Vare. Democratic sentiment took such hold in South Philadelphia on the wet and dry issue that Mrs. Vare was displaced from what seemed a long tenure of a place previously held by her late husband.

Economic Situation Now Great Factor

This year, in addition to the wet and dry difference between the presidential candidates, expected to aid Roosevelt in populous centers, there is the unsatisfactory economic situation. There are few fears that Allegheny County will go outside the Republican ranks either for the Legislature or Congress, but that complacency is not communicated to other counties and congressional districts.

Because of this troubled situation the party followers want Martin, and as truly because of this condition some of his friends want him elsewhere. The more probable outcome is that the state chairman will function in Pennsylvania, taking the chances that exist, and feeling whatever happens will not depress his chances for the governorship.

At least, he will hope so.

Mellon Unlikely to Be Active in Politics

If A. W. Mellon should resign as Ambassador to England, despite denials in London of that intention, there are few Pennsylvania politicians who believe the return of the Pittsburgher would mean the reinjection of the Mellon family actively into affairs of state government. The family, of course, never has been, and never will be, entirely out. It has interests which demand political attention.

Recently W. L. Mellon, the political agent of the family circle, has relaxed his direct attention, but he has gotten some things done through lieutenants.

Admittedly, the fumbling and stumbling of the Legislature offers an excellent opportunity for a strong controlling influence, but it will not come now because of any action by A. W. Mellon. The sentiment here is that should he remain in Pittsburgh it would be because of business conditions and the feeling that he has fulfilled all the duties public service should lay upon him and that now he may consider his own health.

Family Unsympathetic When Blondie Needs New Dress And Money Is Gone

CHAPTER II.

Brokenly from Blondie, "Coming, ma."

Before she entered the kitchen Blondie knew it would be the same old story. She knew it would be told in such a way there could be no answer from her. But this time it was disastrous. Blondie had to work. There were only two wage-earners in the family—Blondie and her father—and it took every cent to eke out the bare existence for that big family. How could she work if she didn't have a dress? Why, just the other day poor Sally Vogel had been fired from the hardware department because her clothes were too shabby and she couldn't afford to buy a new dress.

And Sally had worked at Lacy's two years!

But what did her family care, Blondie thought as she entered the kitchen. All they cared about was themselves! That whining Gert, and Pete, the lazy loafer! Then Blondie saw her mother crying.

"Aw, Ma, what's the matter, dear?" and Blondie put her arm around her.

"Look at me—look at me! Why should I weep to tell my own daughter . . ." Ma McClune never finished a sentence.

"You've spent my money?" Blondie looked at her searchingly. Her mother couldn't meet her daughter's gaze. She merely nodded her head.

"All of it?" questioned Blondie. Another nod indicating that was what had happened.

"What for?"

BLAMES PETE

Ma finally got out the words.

"I—can't—tell you."

"Why can't you tell me? Her mother was covering someone. Maybe it was Pete, who ate like a horse and never turned his hand to help feed his own wife and kids. "It was my money, wasn't it? You spent it, didn't you?"

"I promised not to . . ." Ma's voice trailed off in a fresh burst of crying.

"Who'd you promise? Tell me, Ma, I got a right to know."

"I can't tell you."

"Ma—you wouldn't . . . Aw, what's the use—what's the use?" and in despair Blondie rushed from the kitchen, sobs tugging at her throat. "That's the last time I leave any of my money around here—I'll put it in a bank—I'll hide it in my sock—I'll——"

Blondie stopped short to look daggers at Gert and Pete, who were sitting calmly in the living room.

"What are you blowin' up about?" asked Gert.

"I'd saved that up for a dress," and Blondie was looking straight at Pete. "Where do you all get off—spending my money like that?"

"Don't accuse me! I didn't spend it!" Peter, squirming under Blondie's glaring look, finally got up and with a martyred sigh followed Gert into the kitchen.

FAMILY UNSYMPATHETIC

Well, there was nothing to do but mend the old dress and try to make a go of it.

She heard Gert's voice trailing in from the kitchen: "Quit cryin' in the stew, Ma—it's thin enough!"

"Stew!" It was Pete's voice, full of disdain. "I could do with a nice southern fried chicken."

So, thought Blondie, the lazy lout wanted chicken! Chicken! And all she wanted was her own money to buy a dress so

Synopsis

Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan, friends since childhood, work in the same store. After work one evening, Lottie says she has a date and asks Blondie to join her. Blondie disapproves. Two men wait for them outside the building. When one becomes too familiar with her, Blondie slaps his face and goes home alone, to the poor section of the city. Later the two girls argue about the date and it ends in a rough and tumble fight. Blondie's dress is torn and she decides to get a new one. Looking for some money she had saved, she discovers that it is gone.

Now Go On

M'GOVERN NOW 'HOT DOG' BOSS

After juggling the hot dog and cold drink question for two months, the board of County Commissioners has put it in the hands of Commissioner Charles C. McGovern to settle.

The concessionaire operating at the County Airport under a temporary arrangement with Director Hal Bazley yesterday presented a contract that would give him the concession at the port and in the county parks.

During the discussion McGovern said:

"I am opposed to the county going into business with these concessionaires.

"The people that built that palace at the airport ought to be all put in jail. Now some concessionaire is going to make a big investment and squat in it."

Woman Taken South In U. S. Check Case

Mrs. Margaret Meade, 35, yesterday left with a deputy United States marshal for New Orleans, where she will be questioned by federal authorities concerning the alleged illegal cashing of a Spanish War veteran's pension check. She was taken into custody in Meadville at the request of New Orleans officials. Deputy Marshal Beatrice Weiblinger accompanied her.

Market Robbers Prefer Ham, Bacon

They like ham and bacon.

That seems the best clue to the identity of the robbers who, early today, escaped from Mack's meat market, at 2144 Wylie avenue, with $250 in cash and several choice sides of ham and bacon. From the shelves of canned goods they partook freely of the peaches.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 26.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

My good friend Senator Borah canceled the debts over the radio Saturday night, and they hadn't any more than announced the tooth paste company that sponsored it, than the boys commenced shooting at him. Borah canceled 'em because I guess he knew he wasn't going to get 'em.

Will Rogers

But if a man owes you some money, and he is having hard sledding, you don't go to him and say, "Well that's all right, buddie. Here is the note. I will just tear it up." No, sir, that's not done, in fact he never asks for or expects that. He always understands that he is to pay when he gets it. An individual couldn't single-handed assemble that much nerve. It takes nations to concentrate that much. Yours, WILL.

RAILROAD LABOR PROBE ASKED

CLEVELAND, July 26.—(AP.)—David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, today charged engineers in many cases were working overtime at the expense of firemen and called for a congressional investigation.

Robertson, who as president of the Railroad Labor Executives' Association, is spokesman for 22 railway labor organizations, also urged speedy action by Congress on a bill to shorten the railway working day to six hours and to limit the amount of work an individual employe is permitted to perform.

Robertson is organizing a fight on the proposed merger of eastern railroads because "it will throw thousands of working men on the streets."

Shots, Cries Baffle Squirrel Hill Group

Police today were seeking an explanation for a series of mysterious shots and screams that awakened many residents of the 1500 block, Bartlett street, Squirrel Hill, early this morning. Although dozens of persons heard the shots, apparently coming from Murray avenue, a survey of hospitals revealed that no emergency shooting cases were received during the early morning.

Bandits Get $2,500 In Holdup of Bank

WHITE HALL, Md., July 26.—(INS.)—A white man and a Negro held up the White Hall Bank today and fled in an automobile with about $2,500. They sped in the directtion of York, Pa. This town is near the Pennsylvania border.

Writes Love Note, Shoots Self Twice

In a bedroom of his home at 2042 Tustin street, Thomas Gjindjick, 42, jobless, this afternoon shot himself twice in the chest police reported. His wife and four of his five children heard the shots. His condition is not believed serious. He left a note to his wife which said:

"My dear sweetheart, I love you."

SEEK 3 IN DEATH MYSTERY

Search for an Italian couple and the father of her 3-year-old son was being made by the coroner's office today in connection with the mysterious shooting of Emma Steffanon, 26, of Castle Shannon. She was found dead last Sunday in her bedroom, a bullet wound in her chest. A .45-caliber revolver was reported found on the bed.

Angelo Delos, 40, alleged common-law husband of the victim, and his cousin, Tony Elekis, 37, were held for further questioning. County detectives said their investigation indicated the woman had taken her own life, but Coroner W. J. McGregor, questioning the two men, learned the couple and the boy's father visited at the house during the day.

UTILITY'S CLAIM PERILS ROAD

Unless the Pennsylvania Water Company reduces the demand for $140,000 cash settlement for damages to its property at Nadine there just isn't going to be any complete Allegheny River boulevard, was the opinion of the three County Commissioners after they made a personal survey of the property yesterday.

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern said:

"It seems to me an outrage that the public utilities that get everything for nothing from the public, turn around and hold them up when anything like this develops."

Commissioner C. M. Barr said:

"I have found in years of dealing with George S. Davison that he is a hard man to strike a bargain with."

Commissioner W. D. Mansfield said:

"It looks like a case of the water company having something that the county wants and won't get unless they pay the price. I think the only thing to do is to settle."

Texas Gets Two Governors For Price of One

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Got to make a big noise on the thunder machine for Ma Ferguson, of Texas.

She swept the Texas Democratic primaries under the carpets, in the corners and out the back door.

Next thing she has to do is shellac Gov. Sterling in the Democratic run-off election. After that she must knock off her Republican candidate in the regular gubernatorials.

If she grabs all three heats she gets the Texas loving cup and Pa Ferguson puts his shaving mug back in that Austin barbershop.

Pa says Texas is getting two governers for the price of one. He goes where Ma goes or Ma don't go out tonight.

Ma admits that she asks Pa for advice. But if there is lace on the Texas state seal you can say that she's the head man.

KELLY SPEAKER AT POSTAL FETE

Local postal employes today joined in the nation-wide celebration of Postoffice Day in connection with the Washington bicentennial and the birthday of the postal service.

Congressman Clyde Kelly, member of the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, was the principal speaker in front of the Federal Building, Smithfield street and Fourth avenue, where a replica of the Washington statue to be erected on Mt. Washington has been placed. The statue shows Washington at 20 in the garb of a surveyor.

PLANS UNIVERSITY

Kelly told of his plans to introduce a bill in Congress providing for building the United States University in Washington on funds first authorized in Washington's time. President Washington set aside $25,000 for such a university—an appropriation which has never been utilized.

Mail planes flew over the city as the exercises began at noon. The Pittsburgh Letter Carriers Band furnished music to intersperse the speaking program.

Yesterday Maj. James Doolittle, on a dawn-to-dusk flight over Washington's trail, with Miss Anne Madison Washington, descendant of the first President, came to Pittsburgh to deliver a package of mail to Postmaster J. B. Anderson, addressed to President Hoover.

KIN THRILLED

After refueling, the plane continued to Pomeroy, O. Miss Washington said:

"It's thrilling. Over mountains, through fogs, Maj. Doolittle doesn't seem to mind anything. And we travel so fast. He seems to be over impeneable mountains and zoom—he circles and off goes a package of mail.

"I don't think he could get lost."

Miss Washington explained that it was her first trip over much of the trail Col. Washington had made. It was her first visit to Pittsburgh, she said, adding:

"But I have a cousin, Richard Tucker, who lives here, or did."

The trip, sponsored by an aeronautic division of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, ended last night. The package of mail given Postmaster Anderson and his assistant, Curtis O. Blumentritt, contained letters addressed to President Hoover, Mrs. Doolittle, Jimmie, Jr., and various air and government personages. A. F. Maple, oil company representative, accompanied them.

Gun Used in Attack Traced to Victim

County detectives today continued to investigate the story of James Toscano, 30, of 2510 Walnut street, McKeesport, found in a ditch on the Long Run road Sunday night with eight wounds on his head. He told detectives he had been stopped by six armed men, dragged from his automobile and beaten.

County Detective James Redington said a gun which Toscano declared one of the men fired at him was owned by Toscano himself.

SHRINE MEETS IN SPIRIT OF OPTIMISM

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26. — (AP.) — Red-fezzed Shrinedom of North America today hailed the opening of imperial council sessions with an announced keynote of "national optimism."

Bands, drum corps and drill teams, dressed in gala colors, marched the streets, invaded hotel lobbies and tied up traffic in impromptu celebrations. Plain citizens jammed the streets and cheered the Shrine's "crusade for prosperity."

OPEN-AIR FETE

The city's civic center, transformed into a huge stadium, was the scene of most of the open-air ceremonies. Hastily-constructed grandstands were built to seat thousands of spectators.

The 250,000 registered visitors found the true Oriental touch in San Francisco's Chinatown, where the recently formed Chinese lodge, the only one of its kind in the order, was host at almost continual celebrations.

The first of four parades up Market street, now transformed into an avenue of obelisks, was set for 1 p. m., Pittsburgh time.

The opening exercises of the imperial council sessions was scheduled an hour and a half later. Thomas J. Houston, of Chicago, imperial potentate, was programmed to respond to a series of welcoming addresses by Californians.

FILM STARS JOIN

Motion picture stars from Hollywood were on hand to join in the entertainment features during the three days. Nobles Harold Lloyd, Wallace Beery, George Bancroft and Douglas Fairbanks led the invasion from filmlands.

The National Court of the Royal Order of Jesters, inner Shrine group, met yesterday in annual session. Twelve of the original Jesters, who conceived the order on a trip to Honolulu in 1911, were in attendance. The meeting was devoted to reports of the year's activities.

Officers of the past year, headed by Lou B. Winsor, of Grand Rapids, Mich., were re-elected.

BELLEVUE BANK ORDER MADE

A rule was granted in Common Pleas Court today on the State Secretary of Banking to show cause why an inventory and appraisement of the Citizens' Trust Company of Bellevue should not be filed. Judge Frank T. Patterson granted the rule upon petition of Attorney John E. Winner, representing a group of depositors.

Winner, in his plea, pointed out that the bank had been closed by the State Banking Department last November, and without filing an inventory and appraisement, had declared a 15 per cent dividend. The cashier of the bank, Winner pointed out, is under indictment on embezzlement charges, but has not been called for trial.

JOHNSON BAITS HOOVER ON RUM

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—(INS.)—United States Senator Hiram Johnson today had indirectly called upon President Hoover to announce his stand on prohibition. Johnson said:

"The nation is waiting to hear what the President has to say about prohibition. The boys claim he's dry. The wets say he's wet.

"The President ought to clarify the situation in his statement accepting the Republican nomination. It's due any day now."

Prohibition, Johnson declared, continues to be one of the outstanding issues of the day. He explained:

"It is no longer a question of 'are you in favor of a referendum?' That has been conceded. The question now is 'Are you for or against the Eighteenth Amendment'?"

BEWARE OF STALE GASOLINE!

THE LAZIER IT GETS

ONLY fresh GAS PACKS FULL POWER!

The longer gas is stored, the weaker it gets. Volatile "easy starting" elements evaporate. In addition, a definite chemical change takes place—so that as gas gets staler, it gets feebler and feebler!

Stale gas is stickier, too—and is more apt to knock.

The entire petroleum industry has long sought a way to halt gasoline deterioration. Now, by radical advances in refining and distributing, Gulf assures you of getting FRESH, full-powered gasoline. In this way . . .

By making the finest possible gasoline and by refining out of that gas complex elements which cause fast deterioration—"staleness."

And by rushing you this FRESH-MADE, FULL-POWERED gas like some perishable food.

Careful location of Gulf refineries has made this possible. So wisely are these refineries placed that every Gulf station is close to a source of FRESH-MADE gas. A huge fleet of tank trucks rushes FRESH gas to Gulf pumps every day.

Get FRESH-MADE, power-packed gasoline. Get Gulf—and nothing else. Your motor will be cleaner. Quieter. Faster.

FEDERAL FUNDS FOR WHARVES OPPOSED

Congressman Harry A. Estep's plan to have the federal government finance construction of wharf improvements for the Golden Triangle came in for an attack today from the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. The chamber made it known it does not favor the Estep plan, through this statement issued by its president, Thomas A. Dunn:

"The fact that the Chamber has for years urged the Mayor and City Council to improve the wharves and make them beauty spots instead of public nuisances must not be construed to mean that we are willing to go down to Washington with a tin cup in our hands asking the federal government to do a job for us, which we are able and willing to do for ourselves."

DEVELOPING PLANS

Meanwhile city engineers were reported developing plans for wharf improvement around the downtown triangle to conform with Congressman Estep's plan to seek a $5,000,000 loan from the United States Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Both Director Edward G. Lang and Edward Snodgrass, Jr., who sponsored a wharf improvement plan involving an arched wall covered by a decked platform, talked with Estep.

OPPOSE COMPETITION

Without mentioning the Estep plan, which would provide public parking space, Dunn's statement pointed out that the chamber does not favor putting the wharves into competition with the owners of private parking garages.

In referring to a meeting with City Council two months ago at which City Engineer Charles M. Reppert was requested to submit costs for beautifying the wharves, President Dunn said:

"We did not urge Council to spoil the river fronts with massed automobiles for the sake of a nominal fee. As for financing the cost of the improvement, there is no doubt that it can be borrowed from our own banking institutions and our own citizens. Every dollar that the federal government can lend through its relief organization to Pennsylvania will be taken by our state government."

Dunn summed up his attack on the Estep plan with:

"It would be just as reasonable to ask the federal government to buy the Wabash Tunnel for Allegheny County as to furnish capital for a city improvement."

5 of Ingram Family Routed by Flames, Rescued From Roof

Pedestrians Obtain Ladders, Save Victims

Awakened by smoke which filled their home at 526 West Prospect street, Ingram, early today, five persons, including a 3-year-old boy, made their way to a second-floor porch, where they were rescued by ladders.

Those rescued were Ignatz Kessak, owner of the building; his daughter, Olga, 19, and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Tucker, and their son, Phillip, Jr., 3.

Making their way through the smoke-filled hallways of their home the five stood on the porch roof and yelled for help. Their cries attracted the attention of Jack Reese, of 524 West Prospect street, and Joseph Berger, of 516 West Prospect street, who brought the family down to safety.

Two pet canary birds for which Kessak returned into the burning building were found dead.

The fire originated in the basement from an undetermined cause. The loss was estimated at $2,400.

STORE HELD UP IN TRIANGLE

Two bandits who held up Anthony Santovic, 22, manager of the Hanover shoe store, 415 Smithfield street, taped his mouth and hands and bound his ankles with socks and rifled the cash register of $40 last night, were being sought by police today.

Santovic, who lives at 833 Phineas street, North Side, was alone in the store when the bandits, posing as customers, entered. One asked to see a pair of shoes and when Santovic reached for them the two men, pointing guns, ordered him into the back room where they bound him. After rifling the cash register the two fled into the crowded street.

Santovic worked himself loose and telephoned police.

500 IN SEARCH FIND BOY SAFE

MADISON, Conn., July 26.—(AP.)—Robert Driscoll, 8-year-old son of a Middletown (O.) paper manufacturer, who disappeared in the dense woodland here, was found unharmed today after an all-night search by 500 volunteers.

The child had wandered from a party of boys and girls at the summer colony along the Hammonasset River yesterday afternoon. With the aid of bloodhounds, state police discovered him three miles down the river bank, where he had been following a trail.

He was taken to the summer home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. Driscoll, where physicians were summoned to determine if he was suffering from exposure.

Connell died while making a trip of exploration through Labrador. The other two members of the exploration party also disappeared.

Passavant Hospital Lack of Funds May Force City Control Request

Patrolman Paul Jovanovic helping Dr. J. Ginsburg treat Passavant patient. One of the numerous emergency cases which are making it difficult for the hospital to "carry on" with reduced appropriations. To forestall a possible deficit of $51,000 and continue operation, the hospital will be forced to ask the city to take it over if the state legislature fails to restore funds curtailed under the Talbot Relief Act, according to officials. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Restoration of State Aid Only Hope of Old Institution

Passavant Hospital, the second oldest in Pittsburgh, will be forced to ask the city to take over its operation in order to forestall a possible deficit of more than $51,000, in the event the special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature fails to restore hospital appropriations, curtailed when the Talbot $10,000,000 relief act was passed, it became known today.

Already confronted by a $26,000 deficit and "swamped" with charity, emergency and police cases, the hospital is finding it "more than difficult" to carry on, according to Sister Martha, superintendent. She said:

"If the state cuts our appropriation, I can see no other way out but to ask the city to run the hospital. At least a third of all our emergency cases are police cases for which we receive no remuneration."

The general poverty in the neighborhood served by the hospital makes it necessary, yet financially difficult, to maintain the institution, according to Dr. M. R. Goldman, staff physician. He pointed out:

"It is the poorest district in the city and has the largest number of emergency cases."

Out of 3,710 emergency cases during the year ending June 1, more than 1,100 were free police cases and many others charity, Sister Martha explained.

BUCK 'SHOOTS' JUNGLE FIGHT

Frank Buck, who is responsible for most of the Far East wild animal specimens seen in the American zoos and circuses and who is the author of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," which comes to the Warner Theater next Friday, figured in a new enterprise when cineratographers were added to his expedition through the Malayan jungles to film authentic scenes for the RKO-Van Beuren picturization of his famous book. He reminisced:

"This time we had a camera along for the first time, and instead of running away from deadly dangerous episodes like combats between formidable beasts, we hoped to witness some. We stalked a hungry tiger until he came upon another hungry beast and had to fight to protect his kill.

"A black panther sneaked up, and in about a minute there was enough black and yellow fur flying to make a Princeton football banner. And the funny part of it is that the fight ended in a draw with both parties slinking off when they scented us."

"Bring 'Em Back Alive" is now running in New York and Chicago with no end of the "runs" in sight.

FEAR 10 HOBOES DEAD IN WRECK

BELLEFONTAINE, O., July 26.—(AP.)—Workers dug into the wreckage of 40 freight cars on the Big Four Railroad eight miles west of here today, with the possibility of finding 10 or 15 train-riders dead or injured, though officials believed the men escaped.

It was known that two men were injured when the speeding train was wrecked late yesterday. They were William Boyer, 42, of Newark, and Conductor R. E. Wells, of Indianapolis, who were taken to a local hospital.

There was no definite check of the train-riders aboard, but trainmen said about 10 or 20 men climbed on when the train slowed for a bridge several miles away. They believed, however, that the men were riding cars at the rear which were not wrecked.

Blondie of the Follies

she could hold her job in the store!

"I'm telling you all," Blondie shouted, waking the baby on the box-couch in the corner, "that I'm getting fed up with it!"

"You couldn't put your hands out to save him, could you?" sneered Gert.

"It isn't that—I've only got one dress—if anything happens to this . . . What can I do? Go out and beg—steal something. I suppose . . ." Blondie tried desperately to explain her situation. If she could only get just a little sympathy!

"Why don't you get Lottie to introduce you to those two swell ginks she was talkin' to?" said Pete, always ready with advice. "Lottie's a wise one. He gave her some dough, too!"

Blondie looked at him quickly, her eyes wide.

"How do you know?"

"I was restin' . . . er—er—er . . . I was sittin' on the Williams stoop . . . got a kinda funny feelin' inside . . . you know, Blondie, ever since my gallstones I ain't been well, so I got to sit a lot . . ."

Pete stopped as Blondie turned from him with a gesture of despair.

"What a place," she said almost to herself. But Ma, coming in from the kitchen, heard her.

"Well, if you don't like it, Blondie, you know what you can do." Ma's tears were gone now. "Every time you come home lately it's: 'What a place! What a place! What a place!'"

"Aw, Ma, don't waste your breath." It was Gert's turn now. "These ladies that work downtown . . ."

BLONDIE IS DEPRESSED

"Listen to this!" Pete stood up suddenly, dramatically holding the newspaper in front of him. He knew better than to let these family quarrels go too long. They always wound up with him in the midst of them listening to tirades on why he didn't try to work.

"Soak the rich!" read Pete in a bombastic voice. Then with an interpretation to his listeners, "if they bring in that new income tax! oh, boy! oh, boy!—that'll scorch 'em. Why, I tell you . . ." His voice trailed off as Blondie hurriedly left the room. Pete knew that the worst was over until the next time.

"It's no use—no use whatever," thought Blondie as she entered a little side hall next to the McClune flat and dejectedly made her way to the window at the end. She just couldn't stand it any longer, that's all! They wouldn't listen to her! They wouldn't try to see her side of anything! She couldn't even tell them that her very job depended on the clothes she wore! They refused to listen! Aw, what was the use anyway!

Blondie was tired, depressed. She was worried about Lottie, worried about her dress money. As she reached the window the raucous street noises assailed her ears—screaming children, hawkers' cries, barking dogs, screeching hand organs, rattling wagons—all wafted up and rested heavily on her as she sank down on the window ledge.

What was she going to do now?

MAE CUTNELL GIVES UP SWIMMING

TOMMY QUINN. HONUS WAGNER. HON. JOHN K. TENER.

(Note—James J. Long, regular conductor of this sports column, is on vacation for two weeks. During his absence it will be written by Harry Keck, Sports Editor.)

THEY'RE GOING TO hold funeral services in Braddock tomorrow for Thomas J. (Tommy) Quinn, one of the best known oldtime baseball players in Western Pennsylvania. Above he is shown as he appeared four years ago, when he helped an Oldtimers' team to defeat an aggregation of young bloods in a game at Charleroi. His old battery mate, the Hon. John K. Tener, former Governor of Pennsylvania and also former president of the National League, also engaged in that battle, along with Honus Wagner and Heavy Torreyson, another oldtime Braddock star.

Frank Shields

QUINN CAUGHT TENER when the latter was pitching for the old Pittsburgh club in the American Association, and also handled the slants of Ed Morris and Jimmy Galvin. He was 68 years old when he died from a complication of septic poisoning, coming from an infected foot, and pneumonia.

In addition to playing for Pittsburgh, Quinn caught for the old Baltimore Orioles, Binghamton, N. Y., and Indianapolis. He began his career playing for the McKinney Blues in Braddock, in 1880, and two years later was with McKeesport, going from there to Lonaconing, Md., and then to Baltimore under Ned Hanlon. He also played with the C. A. C., of Braddock, and the H. L. A. C., team in Homestead. At the time of his death, he was employed by the state, in a position carrying over from the regime of Gov. Tener.

AT THE BOTTOM of this column is a picture of three star United States tennis players engaging in a game of cards. They are part of a group of more than a dozen who went on a "strike" and demanded full expenses for the duration of the tournament at Seabright, N. J., this week, regardless of when they might be eliminated from the competition. The committee turned them down, and they also were excluded from invitations to compete in the Canadian championships this week.

All of which has brought on a scandal in the tennis world. Tennis always has been looked upon as one of our cleanest sports in the sense of having the true spirit of amateurism prevailing in it. Many persons are shocked at the expose that such conditions exist.

THE PRACTICE IS by no means a new one, although it has been hushed up at all times. The leading players have been invited to compete in the larger tournaments with all expenses and "extras" guaranteed. Generally these tournaments have been staged for the purpose of advertising a summer or winter resort or a hotel property. Crack players have made a good living traveling from one tournament to another, in caravan style, enjoying the headlines in the newspapers and the "hospitality" of the sponsors of the tournaments. Now the cat is out of the bag, and the picture presented is not a pretty one. It reveals tennis cloaked in the same mantle of hypocricy that attends all so-called amateur sports in a larger or smaller degree. In other words, if you can overlook the pun, tennis appears to have degenerated into a racquet.

LIKELY NOTHING WILL come of the episode. When conditions pick up again, the hotels and resorts will be glad to resume guarantees of full expenses for the players in return for the free advertising they derive by virtue of staging the tournaments.

SPEAKING OF TENNIS, the collapse of Frank Shields in the Davis Cup interzone final with Germany over the last week-end presages tough going for Uncle Sam's forces in the challenge round with France, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Shields lost both of his singles matches, to Baron Gottfried Von Cramm and Dr. Daniel Prenn, and the burden of carrying the round fell upon the shoulders of Ellsworth Vines, the young American and Wimbledon champion, who defeated both of the German aces, with Allison and Van Ryn winning the doubles.

It is apparent that it will be up to Vines, a really great player, again in the tussles with France, which will see Jean Borotra and Henri Cochet playing in the singles and Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus engaging in the doubles for the Gauls.

LORD BURGHLEY LEADS TEAM OF STARS

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—The Union Jack flew a bit more briskly over the Olympic village as the British track team, captained by the popular Lord David Burghley, added its small but powerful quota to the international assemblage of all-star athletes.

Although the entire British contingent, in all sports, numbers about 80 competitors, the squad arriving yesterday numbered only 19 runners and hurdlers. For the first time in Olympic history, Britain entered no performers in the field events, leaving this feature of the games entirely up to her Dominions.

TEAM HAS THREATS

Despite the lack of numbers and a slight epidemic of minor ailments, the British track forces, accompanied by their South African and New Zealand allies, numbered threats in the feature races, from 400 to 1,500 meters, as well as in the hurdles, Lord Burghley's specialty.

The titled British leader, holder of the Olympic 400-meter hurdles championship, reported Lieut. Godfrey Rampling, quarter-mile ace, had recovered completely from a pulled leg muscle that kept him out of the English championships, but that R. H. Thomas, 1500 hope, was troubled with a strained achilles tendon, and Reid, Scotch sprint star, also was bothered by a muscle strain.

"I'm just a young fellow myself, only 27, you know," smiled the slim, pink-cheeked young nobleman, "But I have seen enough of competition not to make any predictions. Somehow we British have done pretty well in the middle distances. We miss fellows like Liddel and Douglas Lowe.

"Yes, we have heard all about Carr and Eastman doing such great things in the quarter. You know, our British record is only 48.3 for the 440-yards, but we manage now and then to win a race."

250 JOIN VILLAGE

The British delegation was one of a group of more than 250 athletes moving into the Olympic village yesterday.

The newcomers included 150 from Canada, 58 from Hungary, 11 men and two women from South Africa, and nine men and two women from Austria.

Sixteen members of the United States boxing team arrived last night from San Francisco. Spain, Portugal, Cuba and Lithuania are the only nations of the 38 competing in the athletic events not represented.

The Americans, putting in another brisk workout yesterday expected to complete their cast of stars today with Big Ben Eastman. Despite the illness that has kept the Stanford star from joining the Olympic forces for nearly a fortnight after the final tryouts, experts figure Eastman is likely to turn the tables on his American rival, Bill Carr, in the 400-meter final next week. This is based on a belief Ben will be back in form and at his best in a race run off in lanes.

Meanwhile Olympic headquarters reported no abatement in the ticket boom, with the swimming finals already a sell-out, and a majority of pasteboards sold for most of the other feature events over the two weeks of international athletic competition. The opening ceremony Saturday is expected to attract more than

HAMAS BEATS LEE REMAGE

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—The punching honors were all even today between two of the country's promising young heavyweights, Steve Hamas, of New York, former Penn State all-around star, and Lee Ramage, of San Diego, not long out of high school.

Hamas squared matters last night in 10 exciting rounds by battering Ramage all over the ring at Wrigley Field before a crowd of Olympic notables, scoring two clean knockdowns and gaining the decision of Lieut. Jack Kennedy, the referee, by a wide margin. Ramage won their previous bout on points here last winter.

The bell saved Ramage from a knockout in the third round, after he had twice been slugged to the floor by Steve's terrific lefts. The California boy took a count of eight, staggered to his feet and went down in a heap in his own corner from another barrage. He was reclining helpless when the bell sounded at a count of three.

Ramage came back so gamely in the fourth to weather another storm of leather that Hamas was arm weary and baffled. The Penn State slugger was so tired he took a severe counter punching for two rounds before again taking command.

Ramage was punched groggy again at the close of the sixth and eighth rounds, but he had enough left to slug head to head through the last round. Hamas won seven rounds and Ramage three, the first, fourth and fifth.

MICKEY'S PURSE HELD

NEWARK, N. J., July 16.—(INS.)—A sequel to the one-round victory of Mickey Walker over Salvatore Ruggirello, of Italy, here last night is expected today.

Following Mickey's triumph, Commissioner John Flood ordered the purses of the adversaries held up. Beyond saying the fight "did not look right to him," Flood would not give any explanation.

The bout itself left a bitter, although not entirely unexpected, taste in the mouths of the fans at the ringside, who predicted before the bout went on that Ruggirello would fade in a few rounds. Salvatore, however, fooled them by taking the count after 1:10½ minutes of fighting in the first.

DECISION IN DOUBT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 26. The report of the boxing commission physician today will determine the outcome of last night's fight here between George Courtney and Johnny Peppe. Peppe went down under what he claimed was a low blow in the fifth round. He was given five minutes' rest and said he could not continue, whereupon he was counted out by the referee. If the doctor finds he was not fouled, Courtney will be declared the winner by a knockout.

MACKMEN LOSE CRAMER

NEW YORK, July 26.—(INS.)—There was wailing and weeping and gnashing of false teeth in Philadelphia today because the Athletics will be without the services of Roger Cramer, their brilliant young centerfielder, for the next month or so in the midst of their drive to overhaul the league-leading Yankees. Cramer slipped, fell and fractured his left collar bone while chasing a drive in the game with the New Yorkers yesterday.

Johnny Jones, former Albany gardener, has been signed to bolster the weakened outfield corps, but Philly fans can discard their crying towels if Mule Haas, Cramer's alternate, continues to hit as he did yesterday when his homer in the ninth inning with one on base gave the A's a thrilling 8-to-7 win over the hated Yanks. The victory was doubly sweet because the victim was Lefty Gomez, who went to the mound in the ninth and failed after having beaten the Mackmen six times in as many starts this year.

Haas' homer erased a New York lead acquired in a four-run rally in the eighth when the crippled Babe Ruth hit a pinch single and Buster Gehrig swatted his twenty-fourth homer of the season.

RICHARDS TOPS LOCAL PRO

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Five more seeded players joined Bill Tilden in the quarter-finals of the U. S. professional tennis championships yesterday.

Vincent Richards ran through Warren Krueger, of Pittsburgh, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0, while Romin Majuch, of Germany, trounced Edward Faulkner, Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3. Hans Nusslein, the other German entrant, had no trouble with John Cardegna, of New York, winning by 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, and Albert Burke, French champion, eliminated Charles Wood, New York, 6-2, 6-4, 6-0. Karel Kozeluh, of Czechoslovakia, won by default from Bob Seller, of San Francisco, who is recovering from a back injury and will confine his activities to the doubles.

Tilden and Bruce Barnes, of Austin, Tex., won the opening doubles match, defeating Capt. Valerian Yavorsky, White Sulphur Springs, Va., and James Mitchell, Richmond, Va., 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

SCHAAF WINS DULL BOUT

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Ernie Schaaf, the man who would like to fight his part-owner and chief second, Jack Sharkey, for the heavyweight title, had taker, one short, faltering step today in that direction.

By belting out a 15-round decision over the ageing Basque Paulino Uzcudun, in Madison Square Garden's big bowl last night, the Boston blond survived the first round of the garden's heralded elimination tournament.

But it was a subject of debate with the crowd of 6,000 whether Schaaf had proved anything except, possibly, that he is not a worse fighter than Paulino. The audience voted, informally, to eliminate both of them. Schaaf weighed 210 pounds and Paulino 198¾.

Schaaf explained after the bout that it was his first 15-round engagement and that he was pacing himself carefully.

TOMMY'S PLAY HELPS TEAM HOLD LEAD

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

NEW YORK, July 26.—The luck of the 1932 Pirates in acquiring for very modest sums three brilliant pivot players like Catcher Earl Grace, Shortstop Floyd Vaughan and Secondbaseman Tony Piet is considered one of the outstanding diamond adventures of the year, and were you to talk to the directors of the Pittsburgh Club you would learn that another youngster has risen high in their graces.

The reference is to Catcher Tommy Padden, former Holy Cross College athlete, who became a member of the Pirate family by way of the New York Yankees and Newark Bears. In the case of Padden a considerable sum was put out by the Pittsburgh owners, after they had studied the boy in the period of a 30-day option. Now they are glad they exercised the option.

SEES LOTS OF SERVICE

In view of the wonderful pace set by Earl Grace, Tommy doesn't have much chance to do his stuff, but Manager Gibson always uses him in one of the games of a doubleheader, and, as these bargain bills have been a feature of the Buccaneer play in the past month, Tommy actually has seen quite a lot of service.

It will be noted it was Padden who caught the last battle in Chicago Sunday, wherein the Pirates spotted the Cubs a big lead and then subdued them. Tommy was a force both on the offense and defense; in fact, he has shown himself a two-way recruit ever since he joined the Freebooters. Padden's hits have been delivered in pinches, and he holds up the sharpshooters much after the fashion of a veteran.

Gibson, himself one of the greatest catchers of the game, realizes he is fortunate to own such a great receiving staff when he considers the ages of his three maskmen. Grace, Padden and Hal Finney do not average as high as 25 years, yet there is no flaw in the Pittsburgh receiving set.

SIGNED FOR EMERGENCY

Padden reached the club at a time when Finney was suffering from a broken arm. Hal really was the second-string performer, but Pat Malone's fast ball which fractured a bone in one of his arms provided a little opportunity for Padden and Tommy made such an impression he has been used as runner-up receiver since that date.

Grace, meantime, is moving along like an Archer as he experiences his first season as a first-string performer.

N. J. Ban May Keep Perlick Idle

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Unless the New Jersey Athletic Association lifts its ban on Henry and Herman Perlick, twin lightweights from Kalamazoo, Mich., the West Side Boxing Club's Thursday program is likely to be brief.

Promoter Jim Mullen signed the twins to meet Barney Ross and Harry Dublinsky, a pair of Chicago boxers. The Illinois Athletic Commission refused to approve the bouts as the suspensions imposed by the New Jersey commission hold in all National Boxing Association states.

Mullen tried to talk Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois commission, into approving the bouts. When the latter refused hot words were had, and only intervention by witnesses prevented action.

CHAMP IN OLYMPICS

GROVE CITY, Pa., July 26.—Miss Dorothy Brown Locke, of Brooklyn, formerly of Grove City, will be a contestant in the Olympic Games. She will defend her national fencing title.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—I hear Grover Cleveland Alexander is pitching for the House of David team this season. I recall old Alex wasn't very fond of shaving, but I didn't know he could raise enough whiskers to join an outfit like that. Why, a guy like the left-hand Smith brother would look clean shaven compared with the House of David gang.

Nick Altrock

However, if he's raised enough chin alfalfa, Alex is set for a year-'round career. When the House of David season's over, he can dip his whiskehs in whitewash and get a job as a department store Santa Claus.

And, if Alex can sign up with the House of Daviders in his declining years, I'm going to look around for a nudist colony that needs a first base coach.

PLANS LAID FOR LOCAL NET TOURNEYS

PUBLIC PARKS PLAY CARDED NEXT WEEK

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Frank Broida

The third annual Pittsburgh public links tennis championships will get under way, if present plans mature, next Monday, August 1, and will continue throughout that week. Special session of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association sanction and schedule committee yesterday determined upon the foregoing course of procedure, subject to ratification by Supt. of Parks James Moore.

Suggestions adopted at the Pittsburgh Tennis Association group session are to be laid before Supt. Moore today. Due to dearth of time prior to the start of the national public parks competition at Louisville, beginning Monday, August 15, it will be necessary to rearrange the customary form of reeling off the municipal event.

PROGRAM CHANGED

It is understood that instead of handling preliminary conclaves at each of six local parks and thus running the affair into an entire fortnight of competition because of added days required for inter-park play-offs, the milling will be divided into northern and eastern zones.

North zone play will be confined to West Park on the North Side. East zone activity will be divided equally between Frick and Schenley Parks, the upper half of the draw to be allotted to one of the stated areas and the lower sector to the other. Zone victors in men's and women's singles will clash at Frick Park in climax inter-zone contests to the windup event.

Further details of the Public Parks milling will be forthcoming after conferences of P. T. A. officials with Superintendent Moore, a real friend of the municipal titular jousts since their revival here in 1930, and with David I. McCahill, Steel City representative of the United States Lawn Tennis Association committee on promotion of parks play. The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Challenge Trophies, twice won by the present holders, Frank Broida, Harvard southpaw ace, and Mrs. Jean Artzberger, Mount Lebanon luminary, will again stand forth as major awards for city crown captors.

CENTER ENTRIES CLOSE

Meanwhile, entries for the yearly Pittsburgh Center junior and boys' jousting close at noon today. Chairman H. M. Rinehart yesterday announced a combined list of aspirants totaling 37, so that it is a foregone conclusion that upwards of 40 youngsters, the largest field in the history of the action, will square off for Center honors and trips to Culver, Ind., as Pittsburgh delegates and P. T. A. guests at the National junior and boys' championships on the courts of Culver Military Academy, the week of August 8.

Play will get under way on the P. A. A. rectangles, Ruskin avenue at Bigelow boulevard, tomorrow at 9:30 o'clock.

One of these, Randall Bryden, Los Angeles, competing in the trials for the national title, bettered the world record for the 8-meter rope climb with a mark of 6.7 seconds. The team qualifiers were:

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Percy Williams, Canadian holder of both Olympic sprint titles, may defend only one, the 100 meters, on the track and field sports next week, Williams is entered also in the 200 and 400-meter relay, but although apparently recovered from a muscle strain, it is believed he will be confined to the century to avoid risk of another breakdown.

BUENOS AIRES, July 26.—(AP.)—The Argentine Olympic Committee has voted to remove Dr. Nicholas Gaudino from the presidency of the Argentine delegation at Los Angeles and forbade his entrance to the Olympic village, where the athletes are quartered. pennant hopes practically depending upon the swing through that sector. They find themselves confronted with a flock of doubleheaders and all of the teams primed to try to take them down a peg. The Giants are keen to make up for the trimmings they received here; Bill McKechnie's Boston Braves still count themselves very much in the running; the Phillies have proved themselves poison to the locals, and are apt to be at least as pestiferous in their band box park as they were here last week, and the Brooklyn Dodgers always are a problem. Heading East under a lead of four and one-half games, the Pirates are in a fairly good position, but, conversely, the strain of leading the procession is a factor that must be considered in the reckoning of their chances.

MISS MAE CUTNELL, of Whitaker, star backstroke swimmer of the Keystone A. C., who competed in the Olympic trials in New York recently and at the Willows Pool, Oakmont, last Saturday, failing to show her best form in either competition, has been ordered by her doctor to give up swimming for at least six months. Loss of weight and strength are the reasons. Whereas she formerly weighed around 120 pounds, she now is down to 106, due to intensive practice for the Olympic trials. She says she had little but determination in the New York competition, lacking entirely reserve strength to carry her through. When it is considered that Helene Madison, queen of the American mermaids, scaled 156 pounds last year and is even heavier now, having put on weight for the trials, the difference in the respective strength and endurance of Helene and other stars as opposed to Miss Cutnell is apparent.

INCIDENTALLY, MISS CUTNELL denies that she lost the Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. 160-yard backstroke title at the Willows last Saturday. She says this is a new distance for the event here and that she held the indoor title at a shorter distance. The officials were in error when they announced she was defending a title.

A riot among the players of the rival teams and the spectators broke up the game between Edgewood and the Cup Jenkins team in the Greater Pittsburgh League at Whitaker last night.

With Edgewood leading 6-3 in the sixth inning, Bill Wilson, of the Edgewood team, bunted toward first base and claimed he was tagged unduly hard by Pitcher K. Henderson, who fielded the ball. He struck back at Henderson and in a few seconds a free-for-all was under way.

Umpire Homer Teaman tried to restore order, but was roughly pushed out of the way. He finally called the game as it stood instead of declaring a forfeiture. A decision will be made by the league authorities.

The Soho McKnights, very much in the fight for the leadership in the West Penn League, will seek new honors this evening when Pat Griffin and his outfit anchor at the Turtle Creek High School Field to clash with the Community Builders.

Two games will be played in the City circuit, Dormont being the big attraction at Homewood, meeting Hank Daly's club, while Cy Rheam will take Reliance to Stowe High School Field to meet Dave Wickline's Geislers.

In the City League last night, Dormont got into the second half race up to its neck by knocking off Books, 7 to 6. North Siders defeated Ferris, 4 to 1.

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and Washington Pilots resumed their series, which got under way here last week, in Washington last night, introducing night ball to the capital. The Crawfords made it five in a row over the Pilots and 18 games in a row without a defeat by winning, 5 to 1.

The Homestead Grays will tackle the Baltimore Blacksox in the first of a three-game series at Barnesboro today. Tomorrow the teams play in Clarion, and Thursday they clash in Marienville.

ALCOMA PLAYS AT WILDWOOD TOMORROW

By TOM BIRKS

The second half of the Alcoma-Wildwood team match is on the books for tomorrow. The first half of the championship, held at Alcoma earlier in the season, found the boys from George Underwood's layout getting away to a commanding lead, and it is doubtful if the Wildwood banner-bearers can overcome the big lead in the final matches.

Playing the same consistent golf that has marked his appearances in the big tournaments of the season, Ted Luther, former Western Pennsylvania Open champion and professional at Valley Heights, breezed around the Bob O' Link golf course at Aspinwall, a tricky iron shot nine-hole layout, in 107 to win top honors in the 36-hole tournament staged there yesterday. Andy Szwedka, of Schenley, set a new course record of 24 on his first round and trailed Luther home with a 110.

CAPEBIANCO THIRD

Johnny Capebianco, professional of the Aliquippa Country Club, took second money with 111, and the third prize money went to Toots Erath, of Edgewood. Toots, with a couple of bad holes, took 114.

Competition was keen among the amateurs, although the pros failed to go for the easiest money of the season. Young Bert Parker, the classy Highland boy, who went into the final round of the junior tourney only to be beaten by Bill Marks, had the low score among a quartet of cracks from Highland. Parker had 119, Maurice Le Bosquet 114, Joe Royston, Jr., 118, and Knox M. Young, Jr., 120.

LUTHER TAKES LEAD

Luther was seven shots up on Capebianco in the morning round, but the Aliquippa man came back in the afternoon, setting a dizzy pace with four birdies in a row.

Luther's card:

	2	2	3	3	3	3	2	4	3—25
	2	3	3	3	3	3	3	3	1—26
	3	3	3	2	3	3	3	4	—27

A hole in one was made by Frank Mekovsky, 18-year-old caddie, at the Shannopin Country Club yesterday, playing in a foursome with John Waters, Edmund Zinsky and Andrew Pavlik. The ball, hit with a No. 5 iron, bounded on the green and plopped into the hole. It is a 150-yard hole. F. L. Stout, Jr., member of the club, made a hole in one on the same hole a few weeks ago.

The pairings for the club championship of the Valley Heights Country Club follow:

Their gross 76 was one stroke better than Andy Szwedka and Mrs. Carrie Josephson and Tom Barr and Eva Blair. Low net honors were won by Dr. Davidson and Mrs. Schwartz and Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Donald, each scoring a 66.

J. M. Slater, a member of Post No. 5, East Liberty, won the annual American Legion championship of Allegheny County yesterday when he scored a gross 84 at Stanton Heights. D. A. Fusia, of the Oakmont post, turned in the low net with a 66.

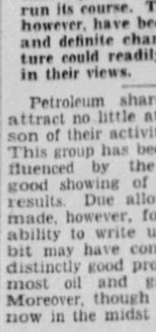
Wall Street Now Expects Regular Dividend On 'Big Steel'

Wall street seems to have experienced a chance of heart with regard to its views on the probable outcome of today's Steel Corporation meeting for preferred dividend action. Even among those who had been disposed to anticipate a temporary reduction in the $7 rate, feeling is that the quarterly payment will be ordered at the full cumulative rate. Under prevailing circumstances, with due allowance for the regard in which the corporation holds its preferred stock, it requires confidence in the outlook to pay out dividends which are far from being earned. Thus it is to be expected that declaration of the regular rate, if ordered, will be interpreted as indicating Steel officials are a bit more hopeful of the outlook for the fall.



Some of the street's larger operators who have been out of the picture for several months past are reported as still being quite bearish. Since the Senate investigation got under way, however, and several of these individuals had the privilege of appearing before the inquisitors they have been taking things easy. The premise for their continued bearishness presumably is the lack of concrete evidence of any prospective early improvement in the business outlook and a belief perhaps that liquidation has not fully run its course. These operators, however, have been bulls before, and definite change in the picture could readily bring a shift in their views.

Petroleum shares continue to attract no little attention by reason of their activity and strength. This group has been favorably influenced by the comparatively good showing of second quarter results. Due allowance must be made, however, for the fact that ability to write up inventories a bit may have contributed to the distinctly good profits reported by most oil and gas distributors. Moreover, though the industry is now in the midst of its best season, refinery output appears to be running ahead of consumption, so that it behooves followers of the group to watch the weekly figures, inasmuch as continuation of excess gasoline production at this season cannot be regarded as a strengthening factor.

Hot weather over large sections of the country, together with continued low purchasing power of its farm customers, caused Sears-Roebuck's sales for its seventh four-week period to fall below expectations. The decrease of 25.2 per cent from the like period a year ago was the second largest percentage decrease this year, comparing with 18.8 per cent in the preceding period, 23.3 per cent in the fifth period, and 26.4 per cent in the fourth period. In the first three periods decreases ranged between 16.5 per cent and 19 per cent. The upturn in hog prices is likely to aid mail order sales eventually, but a reaction from this development may come later, after farmers have met their more pressing obligations. The company's eighth period will compare with a 1931 period, when sales held up fairly well, but thenceforth comparisons will be with periods when sales fell off considerably from 1930.

Interest in the silver market has not thus far been greatly stimulated by the promise of a full discussion of silver remonitization at the British imperial conference at Ottawa, but there has been a favorable sentimental response to this development, according to silver interests. It is said that China continues the main support of the market, taking the bulk of offerings from every part of the world.

Corporation reports for the first half year reveal the severe effect of the higher corporation taxes on earnings of individual companies. With reduced earnings corporations are forced to pay out more in taxes, cutting down the balance for the securities substantially. Stockholders and bondholders who study reports of companies in which they are interested, may be spurred to make more strenuous efforts to fight against the high cost of government by the company statements.

BULLS RETAIN CONTROL OF MARKET

NEW YORK, July 26. — (AP.) — Speculators for the rise retained control of the stock market today, in face of a considerable flurry of profit-taking during the morning.

The market was able to do little better than recover from the effects of the morning selling, however, as traders turned cautious in advance of the United States Steel directors' meeting after the close. Furthermore, there was a feeling in some quarters that the list was entitled to a corrective reaction after as vigorous an advance as yesterday's.

Such issues as United States Steel preferred, American Can, American Telephone, Santa Fe and Standard of New Jersey recovered after sagging about a point. Among the lower priced issues, General Electric and Consolidated Oil were active features, rising fractionally. Richfield shares, which have been selling for a few cents, more than doubled in value on the strength of Consolidated's latest offering. Tobaccos moved narrowly, with the exception of Reynolds "B," which advanced about a point. Such rather thinly traded issues as McKeesport, United Fruit, Case and Endicott Johnson were pushed up about 1 to 2 points, and a few preferred issues showed wide advances, International Nickel preferred appearing 13 points higher.

Professional activity was largely concentrated in the oils. Traders have been trying to get a public following in these issues on the strength of second quarter earnings, indicating that this is the only major industry now showing decisive improvement over 1931. Declining gasoline consumption, however, has tended to make for some caution on the part of investors. Nevertheless, petroleum issues have advanced substantially in London as well as New York, and brokers report some London buying of our oils, based on the belief that production has been brought under fairly effective control, both here and abroad.

Earnings statements continued to attract attention, particularly those of the rails. Union Pacific had net equal to $2.06 a common share in the first half, as against $3.18 in the like period of 1931, but the company took in from subsidiaries about $2,400,000 more in the first half of this year than in the same period of last, which amounted to about $1 a share. Norfolk and Western reported $3.49 for the first half, as reduced from $6.14. Illinois Central's report, as expected, reflected extraordinarily successful control of costs, with net operating income of $4,839,826, an actual increase of about $1,400,000 over the like period of last year. But the majority of the carriers are evidently still failing to earn their fixed charges.

COTTON DROPS UNDER SALES

NEW YORK, July 26.—Cotton futures opened steady ¼ lower, in response to lower Liverpool cables, continued unfavorable weather and under-selling by houses with southern connections.

Houses with Liverpool connections were fairly active early buyers. Their purchases, combined with some trade buying and local covering, readily absorbed the early selling through spot houses and the market displayed a steadier tone, rallying from the initial decline. New buying, however, was small and traders continued to await more definite developments relative to the new crop. October sold down to 5.68, a decline of 3 points but rallied to 5.72, or 1 point above the previous close.

The market remained quiet later in the morning, prices fluctuating narrowly within a few points of the previous close. Moderate selling by spot interests in October caused that position to sell off from 5.72 to 5.70, but local and trade interests continued to support the market. Around midday prices were about net 1 to 2 points lower.

LIVERPOOL, July 26.—Cotton, receipts, 13,000 bales, including 3,900 American. Spot quiet; prices unchanged; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 5.05; good middling, 4.80; strict middling, 4.60; middling, 4.50; strict low middling, 4.45; low middling, 4.35; strict good ordinary, 4.15; good ordinary, 3.85.

Futures closed quiet and steady. July, 4.32; October, 4.32; December, 4.37; January, 4.40; March, 4.45; May, 4.51.

R. F. C. CHANGE WILL AFFECT TRADE TREND

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—In assessing the effect of recent federal legislation on the economic trend, the unknown quantity, which will depend on the character of administration, is the amendment to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act which permits loans up to $1,500,000,000 to public and private agencies for construction of self liquidating projects of a quasi-public character.

Mr. Rukeyser

To some this appears as a mere bit of legislative camouflage to head off effective machinery for accelerating job-giving public works. There is a danger either that it may be a dead letter, on the one hand, or that it might be unwisely used in unsound private projects, on the other. From the standpoint of the general situation, it would be desirable to make some loans quickly and to regard such advances as stimulus to general business and employment.

Toll bridges and tunnels have been the best examples in American public finance of self-liquidating projects. The conception could also be stretched to include slum clearance and the construction of model tenements, and also vast projects for rural electrification.

Deluged by the propaganda of panic, Congress was hesitant in applying the remedy long urged by scientific economists of greatly accelerating all types of useful public works in time of industrial stagnation. By December, the national legislature may see the wisdom of doing so. Meantime, this highly technical clause in the new relief bill offers the possibility of applying the theory in a limited manner without the costly delay of another half year.

By the intelligent use of public credit, it is feasible to carry out useful projects relatively cheaply. Not only are materials low in price, but in using men who otherwise would be idle the country acquires labor at a negligible social cost, to the extent that public agencies provide employment, they avoid the wasteful expense of providing relief for the jobless.

In the earlier administration of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, the criticism was made in this column that no provision was made for job creating new construction, which appears to be the most justifiable reason for the advance of public funds. The nearest approach to a loan of this character was the advance to the Pennsylvania Railroad to finish electrification work which was already under way. The new amendment permits financing of new construction, as well as of uncompleted construction. Such job giving activities, which add to the real wealth of the country, seem much more deserving of public credit than advances intended to bail out private bankers stuck with frozen assets.

Change in Prohibition May Aid Producers Of Soft Drinks

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

WHAT EFFECT would modification of the Volstead act or complete repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment have on the makers of soft drinks? This question is becoming one of importance to many investors. The leading soft drink producers have displayed exceptional resistance to depression influences and have developed a high degree of investment confidence.

But the possibility of legalization of at least some forms of alcoholic beverages in the not-distant future is increasing. Will 3.2 beer or legal whisky produce any profound changes in the sales of such organizations as Coco Cola or Canada Dry?

Any answers to this question obviously contain a large element of mere personal opinion, but there are some bits of evidence which may afford valuable clues to the future of the soft drink industry when, as and if alcohol regains legal respectability.

Two Angles Are To Be Considered

THE PROBLEM MUST be considered from two angles. First of all, what will be the probable effect on the actual sales of soft drinks? Second, will a change in the status of prohibition open any new chances for profit for these companies in fields related to their present business?

In answer to the first question Robert W. Woodruff, president of the Coca Cola Company, says:

"Contrary to the popular impression, our experience generally indicates that Coca Cola sales throughout the 76 countries in which we operate are unrelated to the sale of alcoholic beverages."

As further evidence he points out that the Canadian province of Ontario repealed its prohibition law several years ago while during the same year, sales of his organization's product increased more than 25 per cent and have continued to increase since that time.

May Distribute New Products

IN ANSWER to the second question, the nation-wide distributing organization of the leading soft drink producers may afford them a means to secure new lines without greatly increasing their investments in equipment. While public sentiment at present appears to be veering in favor of modification or repeal of prohibition, it seems to be opposed to the return of the saloon. This indicates that the resurrected breweries are not likely to sell much of their product in barrels as they did in the past. A major share will be sold for home or restaurant consumption and it will be shipped in bottles.

The cost of the actual beer under such conditions would be much smaller than the cost of the bottles and the expense of distribution. An important factor in the sales price to the consumer will be the ability of the manufacturer to get his empty bottles back. The leading soft drink companies already have tremendous organizations engaged in the distribution of bottled products and in the collecting of the empty containers.

Executives of the soft drink companies are fully awake to this situation and they are not likely to miss chances to make arrangements to engage in the distribution of bottled beer for breweries if the beverage is legalized. This indicates that changes in prohibition may open new avenues of profit for the soft drink companies.

BUFFALO BACKS CHICAGO PIT

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—E. E. McConnell, former president of the Buffalo Corn Exchange and now president of the McConnell Grain Corporation, said the local grain dealers would offer moral support and cash, if needed, to aid the Chicago Board of Trade in its fight against the federal order closing it for 60 days.

McConnell said:

"The government's attempt to close the Chicago Board of Trade because of its supposed discrimination against a co-operative association strikes at the very root of American business.

"It raises the question whether the United States has the right to force any or all private enterprises to quit business. The Chicago Board of Trade is vital to Buffalo's water front business, just as it is necessary to give the farmers and grain traders a place to meet and trade."

Big Treasury Issue Is Oversubscribed

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—Secretary Mills announced last night that the offering of $650,000,000 in Treasury notes placed on sale this morning was oversubscribed.

The government will use $412,369,000 to meet relief and other financial needs. The remaining $227,631,000 will be used to pay indebtedness. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will administer the relief funds.

Dwight Leaves Country While Lynn and Tom Are on Their Honeymoon

CHAPTER XLI.

"We'll get married, but not tomorrow! I have to wire home and see if they'll come on for it. I think they will. Mother and father, I mean. I couldn't be married without them," Lynn told Tom.

"Then we'll wait," he agreed, "but not long. Mother and father, that sounds pretty darned good to me. They must be swell, Lynn, or they'd never have had you. And Sarah—she's family, too. And Hank and Slim. We'll have a regular wedding party." He grinned at her. "Going to ask Dwight?"

She shook her head. "He wouldn't come," she said soberly, "even if I did; as if I'd ask him, after everything."

"I suppose he wouldn't. 'Wedding bells are ringing for Lynnie but not for Lynnie and me,'" sang Tom, off key. "See here, you didn't fall for him just a little bit, did you?"

She said, "No," definitely. She added, "Although I did go out with him, Tom, after we quarreled. I was lonely."

"Sure. I understand. But he was crazy about you. You needn't deny it!"

She did not. She said nothing. She was to make no comment on the subject of Dwight as long as she lived. Not even when a year or more had passed, and Tom, picking up a newspaper, chortled, "Well, here's a devil of a note—your old boy friend Dwight gets himself married to an English show girl, aged 19. Feeling sort of low, Lynn?"

But that was still a year away.

"Tom, you must go," she said, now. "It's terribly late. What will people think?"

DEFENDS JENNIE

He rose, dumping her unceremoniously, picking her up again to kiss her.

"I don't want to go, but I will. Now that I know I'm coming back pretty soon—to stay."

She said wistfully, "I wish Jennie could be with us when we get married."

"Jennie?" He frowned. "Don't worry your head about her, Slim, poor devil, he's sunk; drinks too much, smokes too much. He told me you'd seen him."

"He didn't understand," she said, low. "She didn't want him to. I'll tell you some day. No," reconsidering, "I can't tell even you. But try to believe Tom, that it wasn't all Jennie's fault."

"I'll believe anything you say," he told her, "but we'll have old Slim over a lot, won't we, and try to cheer him up." He kissed her again.

"Tom, you've got to go," she said, and then, "I'm terribly happy. Sure, sure I'm forgiven?"

He was sure; he made her sure. Presently he was gone. Suddenly almost sick with fatigue, Lynn undressed and went to bed. Lying there in the darkness, she tried to think. But her thoughts were kaleidoscopic. Dwight, asking her to marry him in the spring, in England. She thought in utter astonishment, is it possible that I was tempted even then? She thought wonderingly of Sarah—remembering how she had seen her waiting, her face a mask of tragedy. She turned her tired mind from the scene which followed. Then Tom—the bruise on his cheek; his collar torn....

MEET IN MORNING

Tom's arms, Tom's kiss, Tom's proven innocence; her own unconscious guilt, meanings, she discovered, so much less than his embrace.

"Sarah, if I can make it up to you, show you how grateful I am for what you did for me," she whispered.

The next morning Tom called for her, his hours, as it happened, more or less coinciding with hers. They drove uptown in the "new car."

"We'll go honeymooning in it."

"Tom, I can't get away."

"Neither can I," he admitted cheerfully, "but there'll be next summer—and vacations."

He parked in a garage not far from the Seacoast Building. They walked to breakfast and to work, together. Perched on the high stools, "Do you remember?" they asked each other simultaneously and their coffee cooled while the White Jacket attending their needs asked, "What, so early in the morning?" but grinned in sympathy, nevertheless.

The great building hummed all around them.

"Jennie's gone," said Lynn, sitting there on the stool, "and Mara."

SEES SARAH

"They made a mess of things," Tom said bluntly. "We won't."

"Not as long as we love each other," agreed Lynn. "And that will be always.

The cafeteria was filled with clatter and bustle; people tramped in and out.

"Golly," said Lynn, gasping, "I'm late!"

She fled to work. Miss Marple asked sourly, "Why the bright morning face? Someone left you a million?"

"Two," Lynn told her solemnly.

Sarah. It would be hard to face Sarah, she thought. Yet somehow it was not. Later, she was forced to go to Sarah's desk on business. Sarah looked up. Lynn stared at her. Sarah, in black, white collar, white cuffs, her face serene.

"About this report of Mr. Johnson's?" Sarah asked, and picked up a blue card with a typewritten sheet attached to it.

Listening, Lynn's eyes were pulled against her will to the open door of Norton's office. Norton's small, dark typist sat there, busy. She saw no one else.

Sarah smiled faintly. "I understand Mr. Rawlinson is—ill," she said, low.

Lynn laughed. "And how!" she agreed.

"I've been talking to Mr. Norton," said Sarah. "You needn't look so worried, Lynn. He understands everything. And Rawlinson will send in his resignation."

A moment later she watched Lynn leave the room, walking with her light, easy step. Sarah's eyes were heavy. She thought. It hasn't made any difference to her so far as I'm concerned. She won't speak of it again.

Yet she did so on her wedding day, her hand fast in Sarah's. "If I knew how to thank you," she murmured. "If I knew how to tell you how grateful I am."

HOONEYMOON

Sarah stooped and kissed her. Dr. Harding was talking to Tom in the living room of Sarah's apartment. Mrs. Harding, an older Lynn, was talking to the minister, wiping her pretty eyes, trying to smile.

"You can tell me by being happy always, Lynn," Sarah answered.

Alone, after the Hardings had gone to their hotel, Sarah looked from her windows into the darkness of the night. She thought, queer he should sail tonight....

She thought of the thing she had done, the loyalty she had shattered forever for another loyalty. She thought of the look she had seen in David Dwight's eyes—a look of utter astonishment, astonishment too great for reproach. She had realized then that somehow she was an unacknowledged part of him; that he had counted upon her as the one stable thing in his shifting world. She had failed him for Lynn.

She was not sorry, yet now she wept. "I'll never see him again," she thought.

She loved him without tenderness, without compassion, without ardor, without honor or honoring. And she had been his enemy. Yet he was a scar that she must carry to her grave. There's my work, she thought; I've that much left.

DWIGHT SAILS

Strange, to feel so empty and forlorn, as if something had gone from her when for so many years she had had nothing, nothing but work and memories and the hope that some day she might see recognition in eyes grown too accustomed to her as she now was. She had seen it last summer—"Sarah, Sarita"—for a blinding moment.

She turned from the window.

Standing on the deck of an ocean liner, David Dwight sailed for France at midnight. He stood there, coat collar upturned, alone, watching the sky line. In the skyscrapers some of the windows were still lighted, pale gold against black.

People moved about in there, did their work, toiled through the night. Scrub women had their obscure, ambiguous being. Night and day there were human beings, active as ants, going about their varied concerns in these aspiring, terrifying masses of stone and steel.

"Good to be getting away," commented a pallid man, moving to the rail beside him, "from this incessant fever and fret of commerce and commercial people; good to be going to lands that are still able to dream."

He was a poet, traveling first class because he had inherited money. Dwight turned; the light fell upon his worn face and brilliant eyes. Even poets read newspapers.

"I do beg your pardon. You're Dwight, aren't you? David Dwight?"

Stupid, absurd, but a vague comfort. Dwight's cold heart warmed a little. He answered, smiling, "Yes, I'm Dwight—and it's good to be getting away."

"That's the Seacoast Building, isn't it?" asked the poet. "It's lovely at night with those few windows lighted below and the tower glowing. It looks like a concrete embodiment of man's most magnificent dream. Seeing it from here, one forgets the taint, the imprisoned lives, the scramble for existence."

It was the Seacoast Building. From those tall towers the nets were woven—nets of speech, of music—and flung the wide world over. Dwight turned away.

"We haven't passed the Supreme Court yet," he said, laughing, "but I've something in my cabin. Care to join me?"

"On Monday," said the poet, "the Seacoast Building will be just another monument to man's insatiable greed." He followed Dwight down the deck.

And on Monday, Lynn said sleepily, having arrived in town very late on Sunday night, "Tom, for goodness' sake, wake up. We'll be late!"

On Monday they made a sketchy breakfast in the little kitchenette and set off together for work. On Monday they stopped in the street and looked up, as if somewhere beyond their craning necks there was a message for them.

Lynn said, a little awed, "It makes me feel dizzy, as dizzy as if I were looking down. Isn't it beautiful, Tom?"

"It's swell," said Tom, contentedly.

"I like being a part of it," she told him. "I love it and especially your working 'way up in the tower and me working down below under the same roof."

"There's a lot of us under it, and darned lucky to be there," Tom said.

The street was black with hurrying people. The winter sky was clear and cold and blue, the sun pale golden-yellow. A plane passed overhead, casting its strange small shadow on the cool sides of the great building.

"Here, get along," said Tom. He smiled into her eyes. "It's great, being alive, having our jobs, being together."

They vanished with the hundreds of others into the spaces allotted them beyond the great bronze doors.

Skyscraper. Roots embedded in earth, towers reaching to the far and azure empyrean. Symbol of man's need for stability, for edurance, for progress, for aspiration. Skyscraper...

"It's swell," said Tom contentedly.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Much fun and many thrills were enjoyed by the members attending last week's meeting of the Enright Chapter through the medium of a variety of interesting games and contests, and, of course, the customary dancing class conducted by Miss Ruthie Miller, of the Stanley.

The boys had a real cracker eating contest. Three medium-sized saltines each, and the first to whistle distinctly without using his hands, received a nifty little notebook and a real leather key case—plus the title of champion "cracker eater."

Not to be outdone by the boys, the girls participated in a "three-legged" race by teaming up in pairs, each girl having one leg in a sack. The race was run in two heats so that all could enter without danger of falling all over the other entrants. The winners of the two heats then competed for the prizes. What a race! Two big girls against two much smaller. The smaller couple had the misfortune to stumble and their opponents carried off the prize.

CLUB PLAYS GAME

As a fitting climax the club members were initiated into the game of "Hi-Score," which is played with a board having several marbles on it and pockets into which the marbles must be projected. The girls and boys were separated into individual groups, each one playing the game once. At next Saturday's meeting they will all compete again and the boy and girl with the highest total score will each receive a "Hi-Score" game, complete, for their own personal use.

The Pagano twins, Alfred and Eugene, the grand jesters of the chapter, and consistent contest winners, are not doing so well in the newly-inaugurated "Hi-Score" contest. Eugene was a total "washout" with his zero score. Better luck next time, "twin."

BRIGHT FUTURE

Petite and charming Jane Fisher takes her dancing lessons seriously and very often receives the "most attentive" pupil award at the classes. She was "passed by" this week, but we'll wager that she is there next Saturday, stepping and kicking as high as ever. A bright future awaits you, Jane.

One of the ever-present Fourth of July accidents befell Samuel Schreckengost, who was badly burned by fireworks. He is doing nicely now, thanks!

Your "all-enduring" Club Reporter and would-be columnist is tiring of her current delvings into the realm of the "Fourth Estate" and wishes to bid farewell for a short time while away on vacation. I'll enjoy reading all about the Enright news while away, Mr. Zeilor, hasn't as yet appointed my successor, but I wish her well.

The show inside's
About to start.
And there's nothing that we hate

OFFICERS
Oh, the long arm of the law
Fills its minions full of awe
And you'll get nowhere by Ranting or by storming—
We too much admire the laurels
We deserve for finding morals
Just when they appear to Need so much reforming.

Please be nice!
Please let us in,

But we're really sure you should not
Go in, it's for your own good, not
Because of fun we'd dry up any source;

Is obscene. We know, we've seen it.
We'd suggest that all you bozos join the force.

Germany's Public Works Program Points Way for American Economic Relief

Germany is inaugurating a new program of public works to provide employment for her unemployed.

Berlin dispatches tell of a public works program just approved by the German cabinet "designed to put 100,000 jobless men back to work within the next nine months."

This is the solution of the unemployment problem long advocated by the Hearst newspapers, by eminent economists, by experienced leaders in agriculture, commerce and labor, and by Mr. Hoover himself as a candidate for President in 1928.

This is the solution of the unemployment problem which many Senators and Representatives in Congress recommended at the session just ended.

The only reason why Congress did not adopt a comprehensive public works program to provide employment for our unemployed is because, as President, Mr. Hoover opposed the solution of the unemployment problem which he advocated as a candidate for President four years ago.

It was Mr. Hoover's veto that defeated the Garner unemployment relief bill because it contained a public works program designed to put many of our jobless millions back to work as swiftly as contracts could be let for new construction.

Had Mr. Hoover called Congress in extra session a year ago and recommended the five thousand million dollar prosperity loan to finance a public works program along the lines advocated by the Hearst newspapers, millions of Americans now jobless would be at work, and millions more of their dependents would not now be living on the bread of charity.

Not only would a prosperity loan to finance a public works program reduce unemployment, but it would also check deflation.

It would put millions of men to work and thousands of millions of dollars into circulation.

It would restore confidence, quicken the wheels of industry, commerce and labor, revive business, and hasten the return of prosperity.

To say that the American people would not welcome the opportunity in this crisis to support such a loan, would be to challenge their intelligence, and deny their patriotism.

A nation that bought in excess of twenty billions of dollars' worth of bonds in less than two years to finance the destructive and nonreproductive purposes of a great war could be relied upon to subscribe enthusiastically to an issue of five or even ten billion dollars of bonds for the constructive and reproductive purposes which a public works program in these critical times would fulfill.

The German government trusts the German people. That is why Germany, although defeated in war, is financing a public works program to put her jobless to work.

But the Hoover administration apparently has more faith in the banks than it has in the American people. That is why it refuses to give the people the opportunity to subscribe to a prosperity loan that would finance a public works program, put millions of unemployed men to work, and thousands of millions of idle dollars into circulation.

Instead of relieving our unemployed millions by giving them work, the Hoover administration insists upon financing our financiers at home, and offering to our debtors abroad various schemes of postponement and eventual cancellation of the eleven thousand million dollars these European nations owe us. Meanwhile ten million Americans seek work and are unable to find it.

Starvation to Order

Legislature Fails to Provide State Relief and Threatens to Bar Federal Aid.

Unless members of the Legislature come to their senses promptly the present special session will go on the record as the blackest page in Pennsylvania history.

A month ago the session started with a definite program agreed upon by leaders of both Houses and the Governor. Within a few days it was apparent that carefully laid plans to produce relief through harmonious co-operation were being disregarded. Up to the present the Legislature has failed to do anything constructive to protect the jobless.

Such a failure is bad enough. It may be laid to incompetence, to lack of foresight or to the pettiness of men unable to overlook minor political animosities in order to achieve an important and necessary end.

Up to this point we might have assumed that the majority of members of the Legislature sincerely wanted to help the situation.

But now the Legislature threatens to take deliberate action which might prevent the needy from securing aid from the only remaining source—the federal government.

Gov. Pinchot has applied for $45,000,000 of federal funds to prevent suffering. The law authorizing loans to states for relief purposes specifically says that all funds must be administered by the state governors.

In spite of this, the State Senate has passed a bill creating a board to take this work out of the Governor's hands. Another bill has been introduced creating a commission upon which the Governor would not even serve.

This opens the possibility that a legal snarl may be created which might tie up federal funds allowed to this state.

Such proposals may not be deliberate attempts to starve the jobless, but that is what may result.

The Ainey Charges

Investigation of Commissioner's Personal Affairs Should Be Thorough.

Gov. Pinchot made sensational charges against W. D. B. Ainey, chairman of the Public Service Commission, before the Senate last night. Previous charges were indefinite and were not substantiated, but the information now before the Senate warrants a thorough investigation of Ainey's personal affairs.

The state has a perfect right to know the truth about Ainey's relationships with T. E. Mitten, Philadelphia traction leader, and with A. W. Thompson, of the Philadelphia Company in this city. No stone should be left unturned in an effort to discover if it is true that Ainey has amassed a large fortune while he has been a public servant and if it is true that his wealth came from the utility companies.

If the charges are baseless Ainey should welcome an investigation as a means of clearing his name.

Debt Valley Vultures -:- -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

Through the valley of Depression,
Through the stark and barren valley
Uncle Sam is slowly plodding,
Weighed down by his burden.

Even while he struggles onward
Faint and weary from his journey,
He must pause to beat off vultures,
Gathering to feast upon him.

Marry-Go-Round

Wives—And Ex-Wives

There are certain moods in which a man is completely immune to the dangers of marriage and the wiles of women. Usually, when he doesn't need anybody to help him love himself, pity himself or amuse himself.

* * *

Many a loving wife spends half her life trying to analyze a man's little traits and idiosyncrasies—and ends by being thankful if she can just memorize them.

WHAT PRICE BEAUTY?

The health-fads I have known to wax and wane
Have gripped the public fancy for a while—
Then passed as lightly as a summer rain.

Of spinach I've consumed a ton or two,
And learned all fattening dishes to eschew,
And yet, withal, I am no lovelier now
Than if I'd dined each day on Irish stew!

The beauty parlors I have fondly tried
Have tempted me; but ah, how oft they lied!
For this I found—a "facial" lasts a day,
And dyed hair always looks distinctly DYED!

When a woman has been married a few years, she positively clutches at a stray compliment, carries it home and lays it before her husband as triumphantly as she would a vindication.

When a woman recalls what a struggle she had getting her husband to the altar, it must seem like sheer, wilful waste to shoot him, when she might hand him over to some sweet young thing who has been waiting for just such a break.

A man is such a study in black-and-white that a woman can read all the popular books on psychoanalysis and behaviorism, and still be completely at sea about the human paradox whose grapefruit she sugars and whose coffee she pours every morning.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 26.—Caroline D. Emerson has written a history of old New York for children that strikes me as vastly exciting for grownups. One learns, Chatham Square once had a marvelous natural spring, known as Tea Water Pump. Carts came from everywhere trundling casks to be filled.

"They're good to make a clam pot pie."

Cat-tails were sold to the poor as stuffing for the mattresses, and the "cat-tail man" was always the children's friend, telling stories in the manner of the radio bed-time uncle. All shops hung out signs bearing pictures. The leading livery stable was called "Two Running Horses."

The tinsmith shop was "The Cat and the Kettle," with a tabby asleep in front of the brass kettle. The "Sun and Breeches" was the tailor. There were no street numbers, so people were directed by shop signs. Hence, "We live two doors from 'The Andiron and Candlestick.'"

Clothes were woven on hand looms in the home, and school children learned the alphabet by sewing letters into samplers. In 1850, all of New York lay below Tenth street. The reservoir stood where the public library stands. A Mayor of that day insisted the city would never grow to Central Park.

Ethelbert and Gwendolyn, the family goldfish, have rounded out six months in their new abode. "Rounded out" is a propitious term for, like civilization, in a similar period they have been sweeping around and around, winding up just where they started. Their orbit is one of those enormously flanged brandy glasses. It has been a vagrant thought to relieve their tedium by giving them a day's freedom in a filled bath tub. But a goldfish expert—and how does he know?—tells me they would not like that. They would merely be like Kasper Hauser, who babbled in the light for return to the dungeon.

My enthusiasm for goldfish continues passive. As a decorative bit, I suppose they are all right, but I have never reached the point of talking baby talk to them. That's the true test of devotion to household pets. A satisfying point, however, is their upkeep. They set you back about a dime a year. Incidentally, someone tells me, Lou Tellengen eats goldfish fried in butter.

On the Waldorf roof, I enjoyed watching a thoroughly Occidental pair of young Japanese on the dance floor. He was in correct full dress with an American gloss to his hair and a silver chain looping from a trouser pocket. She was in white silk with a bright red shoulder flower, and puffed a cigaret from a long red holder. During a tango, they executed steps so expertly, a handful of other tangoists withdrew to watch. Suddenly conscious of attention, they flushed and quickly left the floor. Passing our table, she turned to him and exclaimed: "I never felt so deliciously sappy."

They were airing James Montgomery Flagg's indifference to flattery. From the porticoed leaniness surrounding the patio of the gone and regretted Park Avenue Hotel, one evening, I eavesdropped on a group of al fresco diners below which included Flagg. During festivities, a gurgling goof, mincing over from another table, tapped the artist on the shoulder and cooed: "Mr. Flagg, may I pay you a compliment?" He nodded and added: "But make it snappy!"

Chained to a typewriter in this daily grind, the slightest interruption often sends thoughts spraying in absurd shoots. A young man, delivering an autographed volume this morning, has completely gummed up the works. He sported a bright green tie, and the sight of it set off a gnawing crave for green apples and salt, that has fretted a hot, pale forehead almost beyond endurance.

* * *

Another ecstatic yearn—Freudians would probably give it some inferiority significance—is launched every time I pass the 46th street front of the Roosevelt Hotel. Its gray-black curlicues inspire a stinging hunger for a hefty slice of marblecake.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Ellen Ward wonders whether she should take that new position. It's always a risk, changing jobs; particularly now.

Of course she's been sick of her old job for a long time. It has no future. She doesn't care for the type of people she meets. But the hours are easy. She has little responsibility. She can do about as she pleases.

On the other hand, there'd be harder work and much more responsibility in the new position; but it would be delightful work, with a fine future and interesting associates.

Yet, suppose the work proved too hard or the responsibility became a nuisance? And, then there's the fuss of moving and making a new set of friends.

Oh, it's so hard to decide. If she could only be sure that she'd like it, she'd take it in a second. But all her life it has been like that—always waiting for the big opportunity, and every time it came there was something wrong with it. Doesn't seem as if she could ever have luck like other people—get just the right breaks.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it, stranger? Almost as if I were writing about you? I am! Ellen Ward isn't a particular working girl. She's you, and I, and the whole wobbly human race.

WE'RE ALWAYS YELLING FOR OUR BIG OPPORTUNITY, EVERY ONE OF US; YET WE ALWAYS KICK AND PEEVE AND WHINE AND SIDE-STEP WHEN IT COMES ALONG, AND TRY TO BARGAIN FOR A BETTER BREAK.

For, of course, it never comes just as we think it should come. It never fits our per...tions and habits. There's ...'t to run, or a price to pay—

But there are no just-the-right breaks. There's always danger and difficulty and discomfort with every opportunity. And that isn't because God is an old meanie who wants to crab our act, and puts a penalty on progress, because He doesn't approve of happiness.

WE CRAB OUR OWN ACTS.

WE PUT OUR OWN PENALTIES ON PROGRESS.

Consider Ellen again. ...en hesitates to take that new job because it means changes. But that isn't because changes, in themselves, are dreadful. It is because Ellen has so coddled her own cowardice that any change terrifies her.

IF SHE HADN'T LET HERSELF BECOME A COWARD, CHANGE WOULDN'T SEEM A HANDICAP.

Ellen shrinks from that new responsibility. But responsibility, in itself, isn't bad medicine. Each new responsibility is a new adventure in living—a BRING-EM-BACK-ALIVE adventure. But such adventures are certainly tough on lazy folks, and though, she doesn't know it, Ellen has let herself grow soft.

IF ELLEN WEREN'T LAZY, RESPONSIBILITY WOULDN'T SEEM SUCH A BURDEN

And so it goes. There's always a price to pay for progress.

But that price wasn't put there by malicious fate. It is the result of our own cussedness.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT EVERY MAN'S DOOR.

Ottawa Conference, A Hoover 'Triumph'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

There is ample justification for the "anxiety" felt in Washington over the proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa. The purpose of that conference is to work out a plan of tariff preferentials that will operate to the advantage of the empire, and incidentally, at least, work to the grave disadvantage of the United States.

The conference was called because of the trade war, launched by this country at the behest of Joe Grundy, the lobbyist, and his associates who "raised a million dollars for the election of Mr. Hoover" four years ago.

The challenge we then made has been accepted all along the line, and the nations we have so extravagantly excluded from our markets have been retaliating with tariff barriers that exclude us from the markets of the other nations.

The attitude of Canada, which so long had been one of our best customers, has been revealed in higher tariffs against us which have greatly reduced our sales in the Dominion. She is now proposing a plan in the conference which would cost us billions in loss, and practically exclude from the British Empire our steel products, except in the case of United States Steel, which, anticipating some such move, has built an enormous plant in Canada beyond our tariff walls.

We are just beginning to understand that it is very difficult for us to eat our cake and have it too.

Mr. Hoover Vetoed the Bill

It was because this sort of trade war against us was inevitable if we built the Grundy Chinese wall against foreign trade, that the Democrats, supported by the economists, financiers, many manufacturers and merchants, opposed the passage of the present tariff act.

It was because that which these Democrats feared has come to pass, that Congress passed the tariff measure in the last session providing for an international economic conference to end this madness, and for negotiations looking to reciprocal concessions among our former customers. Mr. Hoover vetoed the bill.

Among the outstanding achievements of the Hoover administration the imperial economic conference at Ottawa will loom large.

Responsible for The Unemployment

We note that the Bourbons in administration circles are still hopeful that we may not be subjected to a complete economic isolation. These pretend to be satisfied with the present losses—amounting to billions. These losses up to this time are responsible for the unemployment of one-fifth of all the jobless; and affect the economic well being of from 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 men, women and children.

The Bourbons hope these conditions will not become worse.

But if the conference in Ottawa works out as planned, they will become much worse.

Canada, as far as the disposal of our products go, will be wiped off the map.

'Huge Investments' In British Territory

These administration Bourbons, living in the remote past, hope that Canada and other nations of the empire will not further resent our short-sighted selfishness, out of appreciation of the "huge American investments" in British territory.

It is true that the American investments in British territory are huge, and they are huger because of the Grundy Chinese wall. Our great industries, knowing that retaliation would be certain, have been building branch factories beyond our Chinese wall so they can continue to sell their products to British subjects. United States Steel and the Aluminum Company have such "huge investments" in Canada.

And if we make a fetish of this prohibitive tariff, and maintain it, most of the building of factories by American money will be in other countries. This is harmful for us and beneficial to them. For while American capital will build the factories, these factories will be manned with foreign workers who will spend their wages with foreign merchants.

It is well known that the motive of Spain in putting a prohibitive tariff on American motor cars is to force the automobile manufacturers here to build branch factories in Spain and give employment to the unemployed of Spain.

South America Planning Reprisals

And these devotees of the Grundy philosophy try to intimidate the British with the foolish threat that we may enter into preferential agreements with South American countries and exclude British products from that continent.

The stupidity of this lies in the fact that South America has been even more vociferous in protest against our Chinese trade wall than the British Empire. Nowhere has the resentment of this wall been more bitter than in Latin-America. Even now the statesmen of South America are planning the same kind of reprisals against us as are possible in Ottawa.

And these "leaders" of ours in the administration are locking the door of the stable after the horse is stolen—as usual with them. For Argentina has already entered into an agreement with the British Empire for mutual concessions, aimed at us.

In Trade Circles We Have No Friends

The truth is that in trade circles we have no friends anywhere. We have lost the best customers we ever had—by an act so stupid that it is incredible. Switzerland always bought far more from us than we ever bought from Switzerland; but in swinish mood our "leaders" of the Administration variety resented the fact that our people were able to buy anything from Switzerland at all. And so we put up the bars as much as possible against the Swiss—with the idiotic notion that the Swiss would continue to buy as much as ever from us.

Well, the Swiss are now buying everything they formerly bought from us from other countries when possible. And who can blame them?

Not a Triumph for The American People

Senator Hull, who cannot see America prospering as a "hermit nation," says:

"An international economic conference could undoubtedly agree on a common policy that might well be carried out somewhat simultaneously or in concert, as such policy would relate to restoration of business confidence, of higher commodity prices, of the collapsed international credit, exchange and trade structure, and the readjustment downward to a level of moderation of excessive tariffs in all countries."

And this, he says, is the plan approved "by all respectable financial and economic authorities the world over"—outside the Hoover administration.
